THE LAND WE LOVE.

NO. I.

MAY, 1867.

VOL. III.

GEN. BEAUREGARD'S REPORT OF THE BATTLE OF DRURY'S BLUFF.

HEAD QUARTERS IN THE FIELD, SWIFT CREEK, VA., JUNE 10TH, 1864. GEN. SAM'L. COOPER, > A. & I. G., C. S. A., Richmond, Va.

GENERAL:

While we were hurriedly assembling by fragments, an army, weak in numbers and wanting the cohesive force of previous organization and association, the enemy operating from his fortified base at Bermuda Hundreds' Neck, had destroyed much of the Richmond and Petersburg Railroad, and occupied the main line of communication Southward, and menaced its river gate (Drury's Bluff) and South-side land defences, with a formidable army and fleet.

In these conditions, the possession of our line of communication Southward, became the main point of contest.

To wrest it from the enemy, I Bluff. selected a course which promised the most fertile results, that of the intermediate line of fortificacapturing or destroying his army, tions from Fort Stevens, crossing in its actual position, after cut- the turnpike to the railroad.

ting him off from his base of operations; or failing in this, of depriving him of future power to control or obstruct our communications, by driving him before our front and locking him up in his fortified camp at Bermuda Hundreds' Neck.

Our army was organized into three Divisions, right, left and reserve, under Major Generals Hoke and Ransom, and Brigadier General Colquitt.

The general direction of the roads and adjacent river, was North and South, the general alignment of the armies, East and West.

Our left wing (Ransom) lay behind the trenches on Kings'-land creek, which runs an Easterly course, not far in front of Drury's

Our right wing (Hoke) occupied

VOL. III .- NO. I.-1

Hoke, centered at the turnpike. The cavalry were posted on our flank, and in reserve, and the artillery distributed among the divisions.

A column from Petersburg, under Major General Whiting had been directed to proceed to Swift creek, on the turnpike, over three miles from Petersburg, and nine from my lines, and was under orders to advance, at day break, to Port Walthall Junction, three miles nearer.

The line of the enemy's forces under Butler, comprising the corps of Gillmore and W. F. Smith (10th and 18th) was generally parallel to our intermediate line of works, somewhat curved, concentric and exterior to our own. They held our own outer line of works, crossing the turnpike half a mile in our front. Their line of breastworks and entrenchments increased in strength Westward and Northward: its right, and weakest point, was in the edge of Wm. Gregory's woods, about half a mile West of James river.

The line of hostile breastworks from their right flank continued Westwardly, intersecting the turncations.

Butler and Smith.

Colquitt's reserve, in rear of Westwardly, through fields and woods, until after crossing the railroad, his extreme left inclined to the North. With the foregoing data, I determined upon the following plan: That our left wing, turned and hurled upon Butler's weak right, should, with crushing force, double it back on its centre, thus interposing an Easterly barrier between Butler and his base; that our right wing should simultaneously with its skirmishers and and afterwards in force as soon as the left became fully engaged, advance and occupy the enemy to prevent his re-inforcing his right, and thus check him in front, without, however, prematurely seeking to force him far back, before our left could completely out-flank, and our Petersburg column close upon his rear; and finally that the Petersburg column, marching to the sound of heaviest firing, should interpose a Southern barrier to his retreat.

Butler thus environed by three lines of fire, could have, with his defeated troops, no resource against capture or destruction, except in an attempt at partial and hazardous escape Westward, away from his base, trains or sup-

Two difficulties, alone, might pike near our outer line of fortifi- impede or defeat the success of my plan. One was a possible and Near this point of intersection, effective resistance by the enemy, at Charles Friend's farm, was ad- in virtue of his superior numbers. vantageously posted a force of the Another, probably a graver one, enemy throughout the day's strug- existed as to the efficient, rapid gle, and here are said to have handling of a fragmentary army been the Headquarters of Generals like ours, hastily assembled and organized, half the brigades with-Butler's lines thence, following out general officers, some of the partly the course of our outer troops unacquainted with their works, crossed them, and run commanders and neighbors, staffofficers unknown to each other, flanks with Dearing's cavalry, &c. The moral force which de-taking necessary precautions to rived from the unity, which springs distinguish friends from foes. from old association was entirely wanting, and from this cause, Hill." generally so productive of confusion and entanglement, great inconvenience arose.

On the other hand, I reckoned on the advantages of being all in readiness at day break, with short distances over which to operate, a long day before me to manœuvre in; plain, direct routes, and simplicity in the movements to be executed.

Accordingly, at 10.45 a. m., on the 15th of May, preparatory information and orders were forwarded to Major General Whiting, then at Petersburg, 12 miles from me, to move with his force to Swift creek, three miles nearer, during the night, and at daybreak next morning to proceed to These inthree miles nearer. structions were duly received by that officer and were as follows:

"I shall attack enemy in my front, to-morrow, at day-break, by River road, to cut him off from his Bermuda base. You will take up your position, tonight, at Swift creek, with Wise's, Martin's, Dearing's, and two regiments of Colquitt's, brigades, with about twenty field pieces, At day- action." under Colonel Jones. break, you will march to Port will protect your advance and flank, now resting on James river

Please communicate this to Gen.

"This revokes all former orders of movements."

[Signed] G. T. BEAUREGARD, General Commanding.

P. S. "I have just received a telegram from General Bragg, informing me that he has sent you orders to join me at this place. You need not do so, but follow, to the letter, the above instructions."

G. T. B. [Signed]

In the early afternoon, I delivered, in person, to the other Division Commanders, the following Circular Instructions of Battle with additional oral instructions to Major General Ransom, that while driving the enemy, Port Walthall Junction, about he should promptly occupy, with a brigade, the crossing of Proctor's creek, by the River road, which was the enemy's shortest line of retreat to Bermuda Hundred's Neck:

> CIRCULAR TO DIVISION COMMANDERS. HEAD QR'S. DEPT. N. C., S. C., VA., DRURY'S FARM, MAY 15TH, 1864. GENERAL:

"The following instructions for battle, to-morrow, are communicated for your information and

"The purpose of the movement Walthall Junction, and when you is to cut off the enemy from his hear an engagement in your front, base of operations at Bermuda you will advance boldly and rapid- Hundreds, and capture or dely, by the shortest road, in the stroy him in his present position. direction of heaviest firing, to at- To this end, we shall attack and tack enemy in rear or flank. You turn, by the River road, his right whilst his center and left flank are ceive more definite instructions kept engaged, to prevent him from Major General Hoke. Col. from re-enforcing his right flank.

"Major General Ransom's di- move with the reserve division. vision will, to-night take position, best advantage.

cavalry will move with this di- soon as practicable, the intervals Ransom."

Major General Hoke's division, now in the trenches, on the right of the position herein assigned to General Ransom, will, at daylight engage the enemy with a heavy line of skirmishes, and will hold the rest of his forces in hand, ready to attack with vigor the enemy's line in his front, as soon as he shall find it wavering before his skirmishers, or as soon as Ransom's line of battle shall have become fairly engaged with the enemy. General Hoke will form rear. in two lines of battle, four hundred yards apart, in front of his trenches, at the proper time, and in such manner as not to delay his forward movement. He will the best advantage.

Shingler's regiment of cavalry will

"The division commanded by the most favorable for attack, on Brigadier General Colquitt will the enemy's right flank, to be constitute the reserve, and will, made by him at day-break to- to-night, form in column, by morrow morning. His skirmish- brigades, in rear of Hoke's preers will drive back vigorously sent position, the centre of each those of the enemy, in his front, brigade resting on the turnpike. and will be followed closely by The division will be massed under his line of battle, which will, at cover of the hill now occupied by the proper time, pivot on its right Hoke's troops, so as to be shelterflank, so as to take the enemy in ed, at the outset, from the enemy's flank and rear. He will form in fire in front. During the movetwo lines of battle, and will use ment, the head of the reserve his battalion of artillery to the column will be kept at a distance of about five hundred yards from "Col. Dunnovant's regiment of Hoke's second line of battle. As vision, under the direction of Gen. between the brigades of the reserve division will be maintained at from two to three hundred vards.

> "The reserve artillery, under General Colquitt, will follow along the turnpike, about three hundred yards in rear of the last brigade. He will use it to the best advantage. Simultaneously with these movements, Major General Whiting will move with his division from Petersburg along the Petersburg and Richmond turnpike, and attack the enemy in flank and > "The movement above indicated must be made with all possible vigor and celerity.

"The generals commanding divisions, and Colonels Baker and use his battalion of artillery to Shingler, commanding cavalry will report at these Headquarters "Colonel Baker's regiment of at 6 p. m., to-day. In the meancavalry will move in conjunction time, they will give all necessary with Hoke's division, so as to pro- instructions for providing their tect his right flank. He will re- respective commands with sixty each man, and at least twenty serve brigade to arrive, charge rounds for each in reserve. They and drive him back from the front will cause their commands to be of our left centre, (where the afsupplied with two days' cooked fair occurred,) over and along the rations."

[Signed] G. T. BEAUREGARD, General Commanding.

Ransom moved at 4.45 a. m., being somewhat delayed by a dense fog which lasted several hours after dawn, and occasioned some embarrassment. His division consisted of the following brigades in the order mentioned, commencing from the left: Gracie's, Kemper's, (commanded by Colonel Terry) Barton's (under Colonel Fry) and Colonel Lewis' (Hoke's old brigade.)

He was soon engaged, carrying at 6 a. m., with some loss, the enemy's line of breastworks in his front, his troops moving splendidly forward to the assault, capturing five stands of colors and some five hundred prisoners .-The brigades most heavily engaged were Gracie's and Kemper's, opposed to the enemy's right, the former turning his flank. halted to form, reported his loss heavy, and troops scattered by the fog, his ammunition short, and asked for a brigade from the re-Colquitt's brigade was indispensable.

Before either ammunition or the rounds of ammunition issued to enemy long enough for the reworks, to the turnpike.

1

It will be seen, in a subsequent part of this report, that one of Hagood's advance regiments had unexpectedly come in contact with the enemy, and had been ordered back, it not being contemplated to press, at this point, until Ransom should swing around his left as directed in the battle-order .-This, possibly, originated Ransom's impression as to the situation of Hoke's left, which had, in fact, steadily maintained its proper position.

At 7.15 a. m., Colquitt's brigade of the reserve, was re-called from Ransom, and a slight modification of the original movement was made to relieve Hoke, on whose front the enemy had been allowed to mass his forces, by the inaction of the left.

Ransom was ordered to flank the enemy's right by changing the front of his right brigade, sup-General Ransom then ported by another in echelon-to advance a third towards Proctor's creek, and to hold a fourth in reserve. This modification was intended to be temporary, and the original plan was to be fully carsent him at 6.30 a. m., with orders ried out, on the seizure of the for its return when it ceased to be River road and Proctor's creek crossing.

In proceeding to execute this reserve brigade had arrived, he order, Ransom found the reserve reported the enemy driving Hoke's brigade engaged, and his own left, and sent the right regiment troops moving by the right flank of Lewis' brigade forward at towards the firing at the centre. double quick towards the point of He therefore sent Barton's brigade supposed danger. This held the back, instead of Colquitt's, and and reform his lines in the old po- with judgment and energy. sition, near the lines he had stormed. Here his infantry rested thrown forward by him with a during the greater part of the section of Eschelman's Washingday-Dunnovant's cavalry dis- ton Artillery, and found a heavy mounted, being thrown forward, force of the enemy, with six or as skirmirshers, towards a small eight pieces of artillery, occupyforce which occupied a ridge, in ing the salient of the outer line of the edge of George Gregory's works on the turnpike and his woods, North of Proctor's neck. own defensive lines. This force of the enemy with an insignificant body of cavalry (be- short range, disabling some of the lieved to be negroes) and a report enemy's guns and blowing up two of some gunboats, coming up the limbers. Another section of the left.

the following reasons:

all of the reserve had been de- under Major Owens, tached, right and left, at different with great vigor and dash, drove engaged -- a dispatch had been and two fine Napoleons. promised by an advance.

delayed the advance of his line of as the occasion of a mistake by battle; when he finally moved Ransom.

reported a necessity to straighten gaged and handled his command

Hagood and Johnson were

Our artillery engaged at very river were the only menace to our same command opened from the right of the turnpike. They both At 10 a. m., I withheld an order held their positions, though with for Ransom to move until further heavy loss, until their ammunidevelopments should be made for tion was spent, when they were relieved by an equal number of The right was heavily engaged-pieces from the reserve artillery times-the silence of Whiting's the enemy from the outer lines guns, which had been heard a in his front, capturing a number short time about 8 a. m., gave of prisoners and, in conjunction reasonable hope that the had met with Johnson, five pieces of arno resistance and would soon be tillery-three 20 pounder Parrots sent him at 9 a. m., which was then took position in the works, repeated at 9.30 a. m., to "press his left regiment being thrown on and press over everything in forward by Hoke to connect with your front, and the day will be Ransom's right. In advancing, complete;" Ransom, moreover, this regiment encountered the not only reported the enemy in enemy behind a second line of strong force in his front, but ex- works in the woods, with abattis pressed the opinion that the safety interlaced with wire; an attack at of his command would be com- that point not being contemplated, it was ordered back to the line of On the right, Hoke had early battle, but not before its intrepid advanced his skirmishers and advance had caused it to sustain opened with his artillery. The considerable loss. This circumfog and other canses temporarily stance has been referred to before, forward, he soon became hotly en- Johnson, meanwhile, had been enemy bent around his right ing against his right flank, he flank, subjecting his brigade, for withdrew some distance back, but a time, to fire in flank and front. not as far as his original position. With admirable firmness he rehis right and rear. they were subjected. many instances of heroism, I before they retired. Tennessee regiment, who went prolonged. more than a fourth of its entire Friend. number. Two regiments of the from Clingman to protect John- the outer works. son's flank; but through a similar effect of their presence was lost.

his right centre, and he advanced hours longer. Clingman with his remaining regiments, brigade.

suffering some loss; but the gap ize the troops which had become between Clingman and the troops more or less disorganized. Brief on his left induced him to retire firing at about 1.45 p. m., gave his command, to prevent being some hope of his proximity. flanked, and re-form it in the intermediate lines. Thus Corse be- heard was probably an encounter heavily engaged. The line of the his officers that masses were form-

These two brigades were not pulsed frequent assaults of the afterwards engaged, though they enemy, moving in masses against went to the front; Corse about Leader, one hour after he fell back, and officers and men alike displayed Clingman at about 2.15 p. m. their fitness for the trial to which The enemy did not re-occupy the Among ground from which he was driven cannot forbear to mention that of In front of Hagood and John-Lieutenant Waggoner, of the 17th son the fighting was stubborn and The enemy slowly alone, through a storm of fire, retiring from Johnson's right, and pulled down a white flag took a strong position on the which a small, isolated body of ridge in front of Proctor's creek, our men had raised, receiving a massing near the turnpike, and wound in the act. The brigade occupying advantageous ground holding its ground nobly, lost at the house and grove of Charles

At length Johnson having reserve were sent up to its sup- brushed the enemy from his right port, but were less effective than flank in the woods, with some they should have been, through a assistance from the Washington mistake of the officer posting them. Artillery, and cleared his front, Hoke also sent two regiments rested his troops in the shelter of

One of the captured pieces haverror they were posted in the woods ing opened on the enemy's masses, where the moral and material he finally fell back behind the woods and ridge at Proctor's I now ordered Hoke to press creek, though his skirmish line forward his right for the relief of continued the engagement some

Further movements were here and Corse with his suspended to await communication from Whiting, or the sound He drove the enemy with spirit, of his approach, and to re-organ-

I waited in vain. The firing came isolated, and learning from between Dearing and the enemy's rear guard. cate with me, but unsupported every skirmish, and now comas he was by infantry or artillery, pletely cover the Southern comhe was unable to do so, except by munications of the capital, thus cuitous route, which reached me jects of the attack. after the work of the day was glorious results anticipated were closed.

a vigorous pursuit of Butler, and of the movements prescribed. driving him to his fortified base.

in front of the heights west of the ber and position. our artillery.

Before we were ready to advance, Butler's entrenched camp. therefore put the army in position occasion. at the railroad, in the morning.

present camp, leaving in our the day. hands some fourteen hundred prisoners, five pieces of artillery and five stands of colors. He now |Signed | G. T. BEAUREGARD, rests there, hemmed by our lines,

Dearing had been which have since, from time ordered by Whiting to communi- to time, been advanced after sending a detachment by a cir- securing one of the principal ob-The more lost by the hesitation of the left At 4 p. m., all hope of Whiting's wing, and the premature halt of approach was gone, and I reluct- the Petersburg column, before obantly abandoned so much of my stacles in neither case sufficient to plan as contemplated more than have deterred from the execution

Too much praise cannot be be-To effect this I resumed my stowed on the officers and men, original formation, and directed who fought the Battle of Drury's General Hoke to send two brigades Bluff, for the order and intrepidity forward along the Court House displayed by them, whenever road to take the enemy in flank called upon to meet the foe, reand establish enfilading batteries gardless of his advantage in num-I shall take railroad. The formation of our pleasure in presenting the names line was checked by a heavy and of those who most distinguished prolonged storm of rain. Mean- themselves, as soon as the detailed while the enemy opened a severe Reports of subordinate commandfire which was soon silenced by ers shall have been received at these Headquarters.

The same opportunity will be darkness approached, and upon taken to mention the names and consultation with several of my services of those members of my subordinate commanders, it was personal and general Staff who deemed imprudent to attack, con- were present during that battle, sidering the probability of serious and of those officers who, belongobstacles and the proximity of ing to other commands, kindly I volunteered their services on that The intelligent zeal for the night, and sent instruc- and activity of all these officers tions to Whiting to join our right, in transmitting orders and conveying information from one por-During the night the enemy re- tion of the field to the other, contired to the fortified line of his tributed largely to the success of

> Respectfully, Your ob't, serv't, General.

SPRING.

O! come, Sweet Virgin Daughter of the Year!
Bound o'er the mead with apron full of flowers!
Come start the blood of Nature—let us hear Thy voice in birds and feel thy touch in showers!
Come with a gush of sunlight and of song!
Borne on the Southwind's balmy breath along, Leave Georgia's sweet peach-blooming vales and bowers, And come, Sweet Virgin, come!

Come ravishing the tender-folded, downy buds
In deep, sequestered vale, and hollow dell, With thy impregning breath, and make the floods Unclasp themselves in soft-relaxing swell!
O! come sweet Dillettante,—with thy brush Painting the rosy fervor of a blush Upon the sky, and maiden's cheeks as well—O! come, Sweet Virgin, come!

Come o'er the mountain-tops with em'rald shoon,
And make a prism round the dripping rock!
Lay on the sky the crescent of the April moon,
And on the smiling plain the increase of the flock!
Come with thy golden locks all wet with dew,
And heaven soft mirrored in thine eyes of blue!
Come with the flower-harvest on thy cheek—O! come Sweet Virgin, come!

DOWN INTO DEVONSHIRE.

The title of this paper is not to journey. A journey to London be considered as indicating that from whatever quarter is of neidle fancy for alliteration exhibited cessity an up journey. The peoon such title-pages of books of ple who live on the top of the travel as "From Piccadilly to Malvern Hills, or the Yorkshire Pera," or "From Mayfair to Wolds, when they go to the Memarathon." A journey from tropolis, go up to London, and in London in any direction, to any like manner, the Londoner would part of the island, is a down speak of going down to the Grampians, or, for the matter of that, sume that they had all along bearing a town, of Honiton.

down to the summit of Helvellyn known the Honiton lace to be itself. *" Down into Devonshire" English lace; of course, they may be taken, therefore, as a knew it. On mentioning the natural and proper caption for a matter to an English friend, I chapter descriptive of a jaunt learned that even at home many made from London into that well-informed people were equally beautiful country of the South at fault with regard to Honiton as Coast. Beautiful it was even in a country-town of Great Britain the light of a wintry day, as the with myself; and I was told of one Express train from London, lady who was so much annoyed throng of holiday at being disabused of her impleasure-seekers for the Christmas pression that its laces were of week, after skirting at a few miles foreign manufacture, that she dedistance the historic plain of clared she would never wear a Stonehenge, and whirling past the thread of them again. The town mellow-tinted, lofty-spired Ca- itself is altogether disproportioned thedral of Salisbury, entered at to the celebrity its fabrics have Axminster pastures as rich and given it, consisting of a line of soft as its carpets, and came to houses on either side of the road, rest at the neat little station, on all up and down hill, with the the edge of the neat little country hedge-rows extending to the very point where the highway becomes Nine out of ten of my fair a street, and commencing again readers know Honiton for its where it resumes it character as laces, or rather know and prize a highway, the houses of respect-(more or less) the laces that are able age, but exceedingly clean made at Honiton, and there are and bright, contrasted with dingy many, perhaps, that will share in London, rows of shops with two my astonishment at discovering or three old-fashioned inns, and that it was an English, and not a the post office, and the parish French or Belgian, town, as I had church—the whole looking as if somehow vaguely and ignorant- it had been quite finished some ly fancied; though possibly they years ago, and as if it were quite will hesitate to admit the geo- satisfied with itself, and did not graphical misconception, and as- care for any change soever in its size or general condition. In one little respect it has reason for its evident self-complacency. a population of thirty-five hundred, it sends two members to Parliament, and has therefore, the same weight in the national legislature as the great city of Liverpool with it gigantic corporations and its five hundred thousand souls; an inequality of rep-

^{*} The Story is told of the popular preacher of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, Mr. Spurgeon, that in one of his discourses he likened the heavenly pilgrimage to a journey by the railway, and warned his unregenerate hearers lest, when they should present themselves at the station for seats in the last celestial train, they might be exselves at the station for seats in the last celestial train, they might be excluded with the rebuke—"Friend, this is not an up ticket, it is a down ticket." The preacher would seem, in his own mind, in the antithesis he makes of the rural districts and the Metropolis, to have reversed Cowper's notion that "God made the country and man made the town." the town."

Reform are just now pointing out quiry concerning missing travelas a monstrous injustice that cries ing bags, sixteen passengers were aloud for a remedy. It is not to disposed of, inside and outside be supposed, however, that should the conveyance, and the town lose one of its members rapidly through the Honiton High mised to the advantage of Valen- below us. ciennes or Malines, and certainly among hills," which latter town was the point of the Sid, a stream insignificant of my destination, the distance is in volume, (having at times nine miles. The public convey- scarcely water enough to slake ance is a vehicle, which, being the thirst of the sleek, patient neither omnibus nor stage-coach, Devon cattle that enjoy the highpartakes of the character of both, est phase of bovine existence in the inside seats being arranged the lush grasses along its short longitudinally, like the omnibus, course of four miles to the chanand there being seats on the roof nel) but very bright and sparkbehind the driver corresponding ling, and seeming to sing the reto those of the old-fashioned frain of the Laureat's song of English stage-coach. Ordinarily, "The Brook," as if this had been this vehicle more than fulfils the written for it, that "men may wants of the traveling public come and men may go, but I go between the two places, but on on forever." The valley is nothe occasion of my journey, there where more than half a mile in were many more persons desiring width, and terminates with the to be taken to Sidmouth than it town of Sidmouth, built along the could possibly accommodate. - channel between two lofty hills. Two seats next the driver had Seen from the highest point of been specially reserved, while the highway, six miles distant railway porters were piling the and perhaps 600 feet above the baggage on top at the station, for sea, the outline of the landscape, no fewer than six gentlemen, channel-wards, is peculiar, as tions of disputed possession, but the curve of the land from peak after three quarters of an hour of to peak on either side of the town, grumbling, and stowing away with the blue expanse of the resentation which the friends of portmanteaus, and anxious inupon a re-distribution of seats, or Street we soon began slowly to even should it be merged alto- ascend a long hill, where, from gether in some larger constitu- many successive sweeps of the ency, the interests of its lace- road, there was afforded a pretty makers will be greatly compro-view of the valley and the town

Darkness had come down before the success of a Reform Bill can we commenced the descent on the never rob it of free nature's grace, other side, and we could see "or mar its picturesqueness hid nothing, therefore, of what I the green Devonshire afterwards thought one of the finest bits of scenery in all Eng-From Honiton to Sidmouth, land. This is the narrow valley which led to very grave complica- presenting an arc of a circle in France.

ocean filling the intermediate will accept-the rubber of whist space out to the level horizon. in the corner from which every The waters seem held, as it were, now and then we catch the voice in a cup, for the sea view is of remonstrance at revokes-the bounded by the hills on the right infinite complexities of worsted in hand and on the left. From the the taper fingers that are working sea-wall to the extreme point of it into endless hoods, fire-screens, view on a bright day, many miles jackets, afghans and what-notsof waves tumble in the sunshine, the private theatricals that are and the surface is flecked, and to come off next week for a vilexquisitely varied in tint, with lage charity-the sermon of the the shadows of passing clouds-the new preacher last Sunday: are sky above the channel is rarely not all these familiar to us in wholly cloudless-which come America, and are they any more scudding in from the vext Atlan- characteristic of a town in Devontic or go sailing grandly over to shire than of a town, let us say, in Delaware? What I saw peculiar On arriving in Sidmouth, it was to England and English life was my good fortune not to realize the rather out of doors than within, truth of Shenstone's line of find- and something of this belonged ing one's "warmest welcome in to the season and its ancient cusan inn," for I was most hospitably toms. For example, the mumreceived within a charming cot- mers. A dozen little urchins tage home, half concealed by dressed in the most preposterous thickets of laurel and rhododen- manner come at night-fall around dron upon the verge of the town, the house, and outrage the dra-May I not say, without abusing matic unities on the lawn in the this hospitality, that I found the recital of a masque, in which social aspects of Sidmouth, as Cœur de Lion runs his tin sword therein presented, much the same through the first Emperor Nathat one always sees among cul- poleon, and Lord Nelson smites tivated people in a small town the Marc Antony who expires in the world over? The parochial gos- arms, not of Cleopatra, but of sip about Miss Araminta's new Punchinello, while the Queen of bonnet and Miss Amanda's en- Sheba in crinoline executes a pas gagement-the long match at seul, after which the mighty backgammon between the dear old Corsican and the great Roman gentleman of the family and his triumvir carry round their caps next door neighbor, commenced for pennies, and the histrionic several months ago, and played corps troop away to rehearse their every afternoon from four to six- stories to another audience. And the tea-table criticism of the mag- then come the Waits, a melanazines and illustrated papers from choly band of music enough, that London, wherein Mr. Anthony blow their discordant blare of Trollope is duly censured for not horns and depart. It is in the making up his heroine's mind as country only that these antique to which of her two lovers she observances linger, and even in the country they are likely to lin- vincial towns all seem, as has been ger not long. are done in the pantomime.

There is a look about all provincial towns in England characteristically and unmistakably Eng-American suddenly whisked into one of them from his own shores could fail to perceive that the general aspect of the place was unfamiliar to him. He would read the same names, likely enough on the signs of the English town that are over the shops (or stores) of his native place. There is Smith, the livery stable keeper, and Jones, the seller of hardware, and Brown, the apothecary, and there is the same air of lounging listlessness and idle vacuity in the men that hang around the stables, the same show of pans and kettles at the door of the hardware dealer, the same array of gallipots and globes of green and red water in the windows of the anothecary, that he has been accustomed to from childhood. But the apothecary is called a chymist, and the hardware dealer an ironmonger and the keeper of the livery-stable a post-master !* Moreover, the pro-

The Christmas already mentioned of Honiton, mumming and music of the cities (the manufacturing towns only excepted) to be quite completed and to be altogether content at being so. Not a brick is out of its place, there is no improvement going on, because there is nothing to be improved, (actually or in the opinion of the inhabitants) and one feels that to-day is but a repetition of the same day of the year any time in the reign of George II., due allowance being had for the changes of costume and conventionality.

> One marked point of difference between the country towns of England and America is greatly in favor of England as affecting the sense of beauty, while another seriously mars the general effect of the English town. In this quiet. quaint, comfortable little Sidmouth, the smooth, well-kept roads, winding in graceful curves, here giving just a glimpse of a cottage at a turn two hundred yards off, and there sweeping away to cross the brawling Sid by a bridge of stone, are surely far prettier than the long rectilinear streets of American villages. But the high brick walls that run from one end of the island to the other, excluding from the view of the traveler on the highway, lawn and terrace and ancient mansion, are doubly distasteful, as objects ugly in > non" is the Greek for "all iron," pag, paga, pan, all, and Kübmos, iron, and the ubiquitous Sign refers to an iron-termishing establishment in Baker street, next door to Madame Tussand's Wax-Works. There are even so many "Pantechnicons" for the storage of bulky articles. A carrier of household goods on railway seeks, through Notes and Oueries to know whether he Notes and Queries to know whether he shall call himself "ecoscuephoron," "ecoscuephoron."

* A great rage prevails in London for giving magnificent names to trades, and special departments of business enterprise—names derived chiefly from the Greek. No foreigner visiting England during the past two years, in whatever part of the island he may have been, can have failed to notice the universal slanting sign of which is displayed in every railway of the United Kingdom. "Pankliba-themselves, and annoying for what indeed with all the towns lying on bor's acquaintance. lovely without them.

ings, and Brighton, and Torquay, ly to pieces within almost a rope's they conceal. Why, having built the channel-that majestic view a fine house, or having inherited of the sea, ever varying and vet, and restored a many-gabled edi- in a certain sense, ever the same, fice with Elizabethan windows, that boundless outlook over the and ornamented the grounds waste by which all the bards from around it, the English gentleman the Psalmist down to Mr. Tennyshould wish to shut out his abode son have been moved to raptures. from the sight of men is not at As for the sea itself, it affects the first altogether comprehensible.- imagination in much the same An iron railing, one might sup- way all round the world, but the pose, would as effectually guard tall cliffs and bold headlands of him against intrusion as a 15 foot the channel impart additional blank wall, but then an iron rail- grandeur to the general prospect ing would permit other people to along its margin, and make up a enjoy at a distance, something of scene for Turner to paint and the beauty of the place, and the Ruskin to describe. A noble sea-English gentleman desires to keep wall called "The Esplanade," exit all to himself. Personal isola- tends for a third of a mile upon tion as opposed to companionship the very border of the channel, is his characteristic. He is con- from the hill on one side of the stantly building up moral and so- town to the hill on the other, afcial brick walls around his indi- fording a promenade for the citividuality. He probably loves his zens, and protecting them from neighbor as well as most other the too fierce onset of the waves. people, but the scriptural injunc- which, during the winter months, tion does not seem to him to in- driven before the south westerly volve the necessity of his neigh- gales, come thundering against To love the stone-work with a fury that your neighbor, it is not by any would seem well nigh resistless .means required that you should No pier or jetty or breakwater exknow him, and the English gen- tends out into the sea, for Sidtleman would appear to act upon mouth is not a seaport; there are the belief that if he knew him bet- only some dangerous breakers a ter, he would probably love him few hundred yards from the shore, less. But the brick walls around over which the sea lashes itself the Lodge, the Villa or the Park, incessantly into foam, and the whatever may be their social sig- villagers are therefore never visnificance, are a great disfigure- ited by the great ships that are ment to the rural and suburban always ploughing their way up landscapes of England. Perhaps, and down the channel, bearing the after all, the country would be too commerce of the world to London, and carrying off the fabrics of The finest sight of Sidmouth is England to the ends of the earth, what it offers to the visitor in except when one of these is driven common with Dover and Hast- upon the rocks, and goes hopeless-

f

e

e р.

e

f

n

the time of my visit the channel from Palermo or Leghorn, bound was very unquiet, and raged vio- to London, and the sailors, who lently upon the sands from day to had not a word of English to exday, seeming ever more angry press their thanks, poor fellows, to and insolent in its advance, and their human benefactors, fell, dashing the spray, now and then, every man of them, upon his even into the faces of the pretty knees, there on the first bit of dry promenaders, who, with their fair ground he touched, and inwardly hair blown about their blooming expressed his gratitude to God. cheeks, and their skirts blown Whether honest Giacomo breathed about their trim ankles, paced to his thanks-giving to the Alland fro along the Esplanade, ex- Father or to the Virgin or yet to actly, for all the world, as in John one of the Saints is probably of Leech's pictures. was not so rough as it had been a wonder to be told that the sight few weeks before. There still re- was an impressive one to English mained, at a short distance from Protestants, who might well doubt the town, the fragment of a wreck whether an English crew cast over which the waves broke as if ashore upon a Roman Catholic in a mad joy at the ruin they had strand would ever have thought wrought. In the latest tempest of Heaven at all. of the winter, while lives were being dashed about anywhere on mouth, I bought a little shilling the perilous coast of England, (it guide to the town and neighborhad been only a fortnight ago,) a hood, which proved a most valugallant barque was hurled there able Vade Mecum in my rambles upon the breakers, within sight thereafter. of the homes of Sidmouth, fortu- lighted with "Little Pedlington nately in the broad light of day. and the Pedlingtonians" which mariners, or to watch in breath- supposed of those who less suspense the result of the efforts to save them. It was indeed an awful moment, a trying length of human habitations. At to land. It was an Italian vessel. But the sea little importance, but we do not

In the local book-shop of Sid-I was always de-The Coast Guard and the brave volume is scarcely a burlesque men of the National Life Boat after all. Does not every villager Institution and all the citizens of think his own village the most the town hurried to the beach and remarkable village in the two the cliffs that towered above it, to hemispheres? Is not the number lend their aid to the hapless much greater than is generally

I confess I think the weakness quart d'heure, as the struggle went an amiable one, and that I was on for these poor creatures be- charmed to find that the genial tween human energy and courage author of the Guide to Sidmouth and the pitiless elements, but, had been able to show that a God be praised! the efforts in Roman paved road existed intheir behalf were successful, and dubitably in the neighborhood; the entire crew was safely brought that the geological formations the locality for his fictions and them effectively. had no poet to sing the beauties of its sea and shore; as, in Crom-were rather more interesting than well's time, though many importhe general run, and dip, of tant events occurred in Devonstratifications; that a whale had shire, nothing extraordinary was certainly been seen some years done by Roundhead or Cavalier ago off the Esplanade; that the just at this particular spot; and mineral waters of the Sid valley as the only striking fact that can upon analysis were discovered to be recorded of it is that it becontain ever so many carbonates longed once to Ghida, mother of and oxides, and that upon the Harold, last of Saxon kings, whole, the climate was to be pre- which ownership was inconveniferred to that of Italy. It was in ently long ago to excite any presthe matter of its modern history, ent interest of a lively nature, it however, that the little book was was necessary to look to incidents most entertaining and displayed nearer our own time for good to best advantage the skill of working historic associations.-As Sidmouth has Happily these were not wanting, furnished no great novelist with nor has the author failed to use

(TO BE CONTINEUD.)

House since the 1st of January 1866, resulting from the tax of on the 1st day of January 1867, to $1,331,808." This tax paid by the South, exceeds by more than a quarter of a million of dollars, the generous donation by .Congress for Southern Relief.

TEXAS BOYS .--- You never catch Texas napping, where there is anything to be done. Even her boys are wide awake to the spirit of enterprise and industry. See what the Gonzales Inquirer, (always prompt to speak a word in good season) says about the Gonzales boys and the young men of the South in general .- Natchitoches Times.

occasion to speak of the highly and go at something."

WE learn from the Ouachita praiseworthy spirit of industry Telegraph that "the gross receipts manifested by the young men of at the New Orleans Custom our town and country. A prominent mechanic told us a few days since that he had received about a dozen applications from two cents on cotton, up to the boys, who wished to learn the 30th of June 1866, and of three carpenter's trade, and we know cents since that period, amounted of a half dozen young men of our town who have recently set in to learn trades, while not a few have rented land and gone manfully to work to make crops.

This is the right spirit, and the example of the Gonzales' boys should be copied all over the South. Learn a trade—any respectable trade—and learn it well. The young man thus prepared to enter life has a better and more enduring capital, even if he has not a dollar besides, than his fellow, brought up in idleness and ignorance, who has a fortune left him. More than ever is it now necessary that every Southern boy should learn a trade-should "We have several times taken take off his coat, roll up his sleeves, v 1

n e v

r

o

e 0

e S e 5l. 0 e

is 1-

d ft

w

n

d

s,

MOTHER, HOME, AND HEAVEN.

Oh! a wonderful realm is home, A place to memory dear, A kingly crown, I'd gladly lay down, To dwell in its humble sphere.

The queen in this kingdom so fair. Is mother, a perfect saint, With hair so grey, and a kindly way, And her dress so neat and quaint.

Her scepter she sways with the hand Of love, and her ministers three, Of heavenly birth, sent down to earth Are faith, hope, and charity.

Her palace is a simple cot, In a vale by their care shut in, From the weary cheat, of the world's deceit And its blight of deadly sin.

Through this valley a river runs That knows neither ebb, nor flow, But ever the stream, slips by like a dream To a haven of rest below.

The name of the harbor is heaven The name of the valley, peace, The river of love has its source above Where angels their songs never cease.

four times in succession, in the Nation- sented Preston Brooks a cane for chasal Democratic Convention of 1860, for the nomination of Jefferson Davis for the Presidency.

Brownlow carried on a two weeks discussion, in Philadelphia, and wrote Union. a book, to prove that slavery was a divine institution and that abolitionists and sought the position of Brigadier were worse than infidels.

Hamilton, of Texas, presided at a

Butler, of Massachusetts, voted fifty- public meeting in Galveston that pre tising Sumner.

Holden declared, in 1856, that the election of Fremont would be a sufficient cause for the dissolution of the

Mr. Pool was a Confederate elector General in the Confederate army.

Raleigh Sentinel.

THE LAST OF THE CRUSADERS.

The seizure of Namur citadel the course of events in the Nethwas a false step on the part of erlands, the Prince of Orange was Don John. little doubt that, as the represent- repeated mistakes made by his ative of the King, he had the right adversary. After the failure of to possess himself of any place the attempt upon Antwerp Citawithin the limits of the Provinces. del, the influence of his counwhich the seizure was made, were cendant. By invitation of the calculated to excite the suspicions Estates, he visited Brussels itself and inflame the resentment of the and was received with every de-Estates. Governor had left the Capital, eration. Beyond question, one of and more like an enemy than its the most eloquent men of his day, rightful Lord, had, with drawn the Prince seems to have undersword, taken possession of one of stood the rare secret of holding the fortresses of the country.- his tongue when it was better to True, Don John seemed even now say nothing. Hence his soubridesirous to avert the calamities of quet of William the Silent. The Namur, he dispatched a letter to speak, and he spoke accordingly, for the strange step he had taken, sion, the Estates demanded of dign punishment. Governor to secure the citadel of braved by Infied before!

There can be but not slow to take advantage of the the circumstances, under cils became altogether in the as-Without warning, the monstration of affection and ven-Soon after his arrival at time had now come for him to the Estates, reciting his reasons to some purpose. By his persuaand calling on them to ferret out Don John, as a preliminary step the conspirators against his life to the restoration of his authority, and liberty, and bring them to con- first, that he should maintain the The States Ghent Treaty and Perpetual replied with many protestations of Edict, secondly, that he should fidelity to his Majesty and the give up Namur Castle, and third-Catholic religion, and signified ly, that he should at once dismiss their willingness, if Don John the German mercenaries. Other would point them out, to bring conditions were added, less imthe offenders to justice. But portant it is true, but from a nothing came of these negotia- Spanish stand-point in the last tions. While they were yet pend- degree, irritating and insolent .ing, an abortive attempt of the Never was victorious Crusader so Antwerp, and some intercepted let- terms proposed, were, in fact, ters, proving that he was tampering tantamount to a declaration of with the German mercenaries, war. With secret joy, Don John with a view to retain them in the saw that the day of negotiation country, put an end to all hope was gone by, and that the sword of a peaceful accommodation.- must now decide the controversy. Watching with silent sagacity His Majesty, he declared, had at

f

,

1

1

•

s

r

a t

0

e

f

n

n

d

war upon these rebellious Provin- emblazoned banner of their vicces and he would do so with all torious leader, with its memorahis heart. An army, formidable ble inscription, "In hoc signo vici in numbers and still more so from Turcos, in hoc hæreticos vinvalor and discipline, was rapidly cari." Late in the day, the vancollecting under his banner .- guard of the Spaniards came in Mansfield brought a considerable sight of the rear of the retreating body of troops from France, and army. Don John at once detailed the afterwards famous Alexander a body of six hundred chosen of Parma arrived soon after with troopers and a thousand infantry, several choice regiments from with orders to occupy the enemy, Italy and Spain. The latter found until the main body under himhis old play-fellow worn with the self and Alexander of Parma cares and anxieties of his post, should arrive. A spirited attack but the ghost of his former was at once begun upon the reself. But like the war-horse of treating Netherlanders, in the Scripture that snuffeth the battle course of which the Prince of afar off and saith among the Parma rode up to reconnoitre. trumpets ha, ha, something of The army of the Estates was at Don John's old fire and energy be- this moment, proceeding along gan to revive amid the clash of the borders of a deep ravine, arms. His army numbered about filled with mire and water, and as twenty thousand fighting men; broad and more dangerous than a troops trained in the school of river. Parma noticed the waverthose warriors, who had carried ing of their spears as the columns the terror of the Spanish arms to passed hurriedly and confusedly more than once had smitten to genius, saw that the hour was the dust the power of the great come for striking a decisive blow. monarchy of France. The army Plunging into the dangerous of the Estates was equal in num- swamp, he and inexperienced, officers. It resistless fury on the foe.

last commissioned him to make their heads streamed the cross the heart of the New World and forward and with the intuition of struggled bers, but in scarcely anything else through, and waiting only until besides. Above all, it was com- his troopers had gained a footing manded by second-rate, or by raw by his side, he hurled them with had been the original intention of rout that ensued was disgraceful. the patriots, to attack Don John Panic-stricken, the Netherland in Namur, but learning that he cavalry turned and fled without a purposed himself to advance, their blow, charging through the ranks officers determined to fall back on of the retreating infantry, and Gemblours, which was nine miles throwing them into the wilddistant from that city. The re- est disorder. In a moment, treat began on the last day of the whole army broke to pieces January, 1598. At early dawn, and lay a struggling and terrified the Spaniards broke up their camp mass at the mercy of the enemy. and began the pursuit. Above Resistance, properly speaking,

18

W

a

to wi

fre

he

it

to de

hi

et er

st

Je

th

h bi y

al

to

b si

W

re

E

c a

n

d li

h

h

h

t

i

a

h

1 ŀ

thorities, lay dead on the field. proceeding with his military preaccomplished within the space of victory; but this or drowned.

tates, went far to compensate for and a man."

there was none. When at length, Estates. Troops were rapidly enweary of slaughter, the swords of rolled and equipped, and the the pursuers ceased from their patriots soon saw themselves again bloody work, ten thousand Neth- in condition to take the field. erlanders, according to some au- On his own side, Don John was The most accommodating credu- parations on an extensive scale. lity will, perhaps, refuse to credit Some towns of second-rate importhese figures, when it is remem- tance had fallen into his hands in bered that this slaughter was consequence of the Gemblours gain was an hour and a half, and by but a more than counterbalanced by the fraction, from one thousand to loss of the important town of twelve hundred men, of the Amsterdam, which, situated in Spanish army. It is certain, at the heart of Holland, had long any rate, that the States' army held out for the cause of the King. was annihilated. Guns, baggage, His army now numbered thirty camp-equipage, ammunition, all thousand fighting men, many of fell into the victors' hands. The them seasoned veterans from Italy few hundreds of miserable prison- and Spain. But he lacked the ers captured, were either hanged means to make this powerful force available. The mercenaries, who The news of the terrible disas- fought under his banner, fought ter of Gemblours was received in for gold alone, and gold Don Brussels with more indignation John had none to give them. than alarm. The defeat was at- Pent within the limits of a camp, tributed, no doubt with much his fiery spirit chafed high under justice, to the jealousies and self- this enforced inactivity. It is ish rivalries of the nobles; and truly pathetic to read his appeals the Prince of Orange had much to his brother, at this time, either ado to restrain the popular fury to recall him, or to furnish him from breaking out in some act of with the means of carrying on violence against "the traitors." the war. He was deeply pained, To him all eyes were turned in he said, at being disgraced and this hour of extremity; and the abandoned by the King, having unanimity produced by the dis- served him "with love and faith aster in the Councils of the Es- and heartiness, both as a brother "Our lives," he its other consequences. Prompt added, are staked upon this cast efforts were put forth to organize and all "we wish is to lose them and equip a second army. Orange honorably." Whether from the dispatched envoys to England to poverty of his Exchequer or from arrange for a subsidy for the the secret distrust he felt of Don coming campaign, and sent Com- John's design, or from both causes missioners throughout the Prov- combined, Philip still delayed to inces to raise the respective con- send him the necessary subsidies. tributions agreed upon by the More or less of suspicion will alinfamy. to whom the dust of the melée had interment. ing fever burnt within his veins, family of Spain. with the battle and its stern in- that brilliant and dashing courage ways attach to him, that he caused terests. Once more his fading a slow poison to be administered eye looked upon the shock of to his brother, about this time, charging squadrons, and once with a view to remove him forever more his deadening ear caught from his path. As this suspicion, the voice of "the thunder of the however, was never clearly proved, captains and the shouting."it is, perhaps, no more than just Reason, however, returned before to give him the benefit of the the hour of his death, and enabled Enough of known and him to make his last testamentary established criminality attaches to dispositions. On the first day of him, to couple his name with October, 1578, the anniversary of There was Lepanto, he calmly breathed enough, indeed, in the circum- his last. The body was borne in stances and surroundings of Don State to Namur, and the heart John, without referring it to the taken out, embalmed and buried agency of poison, to account for there. To this day may be read, the final catastrophe now near at in that town, the inscription on Devoured with care, the tablet, which indicated the braved by "heretics and rebels," spot where that lion-heart returnyet powerless to strike, neglected ed to dust. The body, itself, and suspected at home, the hero however, was carried to Spain for It had been Don been as the breath of his nostrils, John's dying request to his brother sighed at length for rest. He that his remains might rest by was soon to find a long and last the side of his Imperial father; repose. Ever since the death of and Philip, with decency, could Escovedo, a consuming melan- scarcely refuse. To save expense, choly had preyed upon his spirits, however, the son and successor of and to the ravages produced by the second Charlemagne, the mental grief and depression, were owner of the gold and silver soon to be added those of physical mines of Mexico and Peru, had disease. In his fortified camp, the body cut into three parts, within a league of Namur, the packed into as many bags, for life of the last Crusader was eb- convenience of transportation, bing fast away. A miserable and carried privately, and on hovel, the single room of which horse-back, through France to had once been used for a pigeon-their destination. The ghastly house, was the spot that witnessed remains at length found rest in the last moments of his chequered the vaults of the Escurial, the and brilliant career. A consum- palace and the tomb of the royal and during the last few days of So lived and died the last Cruhis illness, his mind wandered. sader whom the annals of Chiv-Like a later and mightier warrior; alry were to know. Not, cerhis thoughts, in these closing tainly, a great man or even a great hours of delirium, were again commander, he had yet much of which so captivates the imagina- hero who bucklered this great tion in the exploits of a Tancred cause, his character seems wantor a Richard Coeur de Lion. The ing in almost every element of romantic circumstances of his true greatness. He was, in truth, birth and rearing, his youth, his utterly unable to understand or apbeauty, his impetuous valor, and preciate his great antagonist-his his high and chivalrous bearing, thought could not comprehend the inspire a genuine sympathy in his character of William, of Orange. fortunes and for his untimely "Damned heretic and rebel," he fate-a sympathy which may be described him to Philip, and to survive to that supreme hour "When wrapt in fire, the realms of suited Ether glow, And Heaven's last thunders shake the Contrasted with the Protestant indulged without check, so long as damned heretic and rebel he, no his efforts are directed against the doubt, honestly thought William. powerful proselytes of a false re- Power, and fame, and honor, were ligion. It should never be for- his guiding stars through life, and gotten, however, that he lost his he could form no conception of life in the attempt to reduce to one to whom power, and fame. political and religious servitude a and honors, were but glittering nation of freemen, in whose veins baubles in comparison. If there flows the same blood that reddens be any value in the examples of in our own. His last efforts were History, his surely is pregnant directed, unfortunately, for his with instruction. Longing for a fame, against the spirit of that kingly crown, when his hopes Reformation which forms the great proved fallacious, he could make epoch of Modern History-for no compromise with fate. Like a which, in its mighty struggle for caged eagle he beat his wings existence, more precious blood vainly against the bars of his than his was to be spilt, and prison-house, pined, drooped, and which, as we believe, is destined died-one more name added to the long list of those so well

1

" To point a moral or adorn a tale." (CONCLUDED.)

WE gather the following facts in re- count of his views on "the Presiding gard to the late Bishop Soule, from the Christian Advocate of Nashville, Tenn:

He was born in Bristol, Maine, August 1st, 1780, and was a "descendant of George Soule, one of the Pilgrim Fathers who came to New England in the Mayflower." He received license to preach in 1798, and labored in Maine till 1816, when he was appointed Editor of the Methodist Magazine. In 1820, he was elected Bishop, but declined on account of his views on "the Presiding Elder question." At the General Conference, held in Baltimore in 1824, he was reflected to the Episcopate, and ordained by Bishops McKendree, George, and Roberts. From that time until he was forced by the weight of years and increasing infirmities to retire from active service, he was abundant in labors, scorning ease and self-indulgence. bors, scorning ease and self-indulgence, consecrating all his powers to the dif-ficult and responsible work which had been assigned him by the Church.

MEMORIAL FLOWERS.

THE Lord of light, who rules the hours, Has scattered through our sunny land, Mementoes of His love in flowers, With lavish hand.

This month they bloom in beauty rare, And more than wonted sweets display, As conscious of the part, they bear The Tenth of May.

On which the South in plaintive tone Of pride and sorrow mixed with bliss, Speaks: "As a nation, I can own No day but this!

I give on it, my glorious dead
The tribute, they have earned so well, And with each bud and blossom shed A mystic spell.

I lay the Laurel wreath above The Cedar with its sacred ties, And place them, with a mother's love, Where JACKSON lies.

The Lily in its loveliness, Pure as the stream where it awoke, And spotless as his Bishop's dress, I give to Polk.

To Albert Sidney Johnson, Moss, And Rosemary and Balm; to these Entwisted in a simple Cross, I add Heartsease.

The Fleur-de-Lis, in song and lay The emblem of true knight-hood's pride, I place commixed with Jessamine spray, By Ashby's side.

Fresh Morning-Glory buds I twine With scarlet Woodbine laid beneath; And mingle with them Eglantine; For Pelham's wreath. The Honeysuckle's rosy drift, Whence fragrance dripping dews distil, I offer as the proper gift, For Ambrose Hill.

O'er PENDER'S pure and sacred dust Let Bleeding Hearts and Bays be swept; He well deserved his Country's trust So nobly kept!

Let RAMSEUR'S native pines drop down Their leaves and odorous gums, displayed To form with Ivy-flowers a down, Where he lies laid.

While Orange blossoms fall like snow To fill the air with fragrance ripe, And form of MAXCY GREGG, below, The truest type.

Where DOLES and BARTOW rest in death, Strew Hyacinths and Mignonette, And scatter with its balmy breath, The Violet.

The fairest of the radiant dyes, Which paint in living gems her sward, The Land of Flowers well supplies To honor WARD.

The grand Magnolia's blossoms fall, Mingling with Fern their snowy loads, And form a freshly fragrant pall To cover RHODES.

Let Stars of Bethlehem gleaming lie, As pure as BARKSDALE'S soul, which soars While he exclaims: "I GLADLY DIE In SUCH A CAUSE!"

GRANBURY rests in dreamless sleep, And heaped upon his grave's green sod, I let the Crimson Cactus creep Round Golden Rod.

Of ZOLLICOFFER, who went first To plead my cause at Heaven's bar, The Am'ranth's buds to glory burst, Fit emblems are. For Morgan let the wild wood Grape Afford a dewy diadem, And with its drooping tendrils drape The Buck-eye's stem.

Missouri, from the fertile fields Washed by her giant river's wave. The gorgeous Rhododendron yields McCulloch's grave.

Around the stone with CLEBURNE'S name, Wreathe Daisies and the Golden Bell, And Trumpet-flowers with hearts of flame, And Asphodel.

For him who made all hearts his own, The sweetest Rose of love shall bloom, In buds of blushing beauty strown On STUART'S tomb.

Each nameless nook and scattered spot, Which hides my children from my view, I mark with the Forget-me-not, In Heaven's own blue.

Of all the varied vernal race I give my cherished dead a part, Except the Cypress; that I place Upon MY heart.

FANNY DOWNING.

NATIONAL GLORY.

THE land we love is just true national glory, we shall not emerging from the storms of a only add to the interest, but to civil conflict, the bloodiest of the utility of your excellent modern times, the passions engendered by opposing interests, by flered by opposing interests, by flere collisions in the Halls of not consist in its physical grand-Congress, and by the still flercer, eur, this may develop the talent and far more terrible collisions and excite the patriotism of a on hundreds of battle-fields, have people, but cannot constitute their not yet died away. If then we glory. Savages may roam amid can calmly turn away from scenes scenes of unsurpassed beauty, of sorrow and blood, and direct and magnificence. They may the attention of our readers to a live in the caverns of mountains.

whose granite bases, and towering cent victims, may be the boast of summits, whose huge boulders, barbarians, but cannot add to the and lofty cedars, afford scenery the true glory of a nation. War may most variegated and sublime. - sometimes be necessary, in de-They may have their homes close fense of honor, or life of purity to the thunders of Niagara and and innocence, of great principles, hard by lakes whose beauty at- or inalienable rights; but even tracts the admiration of all .- then must be resorted to in the Still they will be savages with no last extremity as the "ultima glorious banner floating over their ratio." heads, and no national glory ening peal from ocean to ocean.

War, when carried on for conshedding its light upon their bar- quest, for subjugation; and in a Our forests were manner, cruel and vindictive, begrander when they waved in comes the shame and not the primeval beauty over the half- glory of a nation. When the naked form of the dusky Indian, ruthless warrior, forgetful of the than when falling beneath the claims of women, of the demands heavy blows of the wood-man's of christianity, and of the cries of axe. Our rivers swept on to the innocence, goes forth to destroy, ocean with as much glory when with vandal fury, private dwelonly agitated by the canoe of the lings and public edifices, temples savage, as when bearing upon of learning, and temples of retheir bosoms mighty steamers ligion, cultivated flelds, prosperfreighted with costliest merchan- ous cities, and defenceless villadise. In a word, before the foot ges; then he disgraces his flag, of civilization trod our soil, be- and brings a "reproach to his fore the axe, or saw, or plane, or people." A nation may honor hammer commenced their work, her heroes when they have fought before the ears were stunned with to defend the right, to protect the the din of business, or the clatter of helpless, and to turn away ruthmachinery, before academies and less hordes that are pouring like a colleges dotted the land, or church-tide of desolation over her fair es lifted their spires to Heaven, fields and happy homes. But a before genius invented or talent nation derives no honor from discovered; grandeur was written blood-thirsty Attilas, that sweep upon the mountain and the vale, like a desolating storm over homes and was proclaimed in one deaf- of innocence and Edens of peace and loveliness. Wholesale robbery 2. Nor does the glory of a nation and murder, heartless conquest consist in its physical courage, or and rapine can never add to the brute force. To sound the war- glory of a nation. When such whoop and raise the battle-cry, to heroes are honored, it only shows lead victorious hosts over fields of the absurdity of passion, and carnage, to make homes desolate, the fearful perversion of the moral and children orphans, to carry emotions. When an entire peofire and sword, and bring misery, ple can offer honors to heroes, and ruin, to thousands of inno- whose cruel orders were to destroy ricultural products and to leave and thus increase the material the desolation so complete that prosperity, and add to the glory a "crow" in passing over an en- of the nation. Let enterprise go tire region, would be compelled to forward, making inventions and carry his rations with him; then discoveries, adding to the means may we lament more over the of human happiness, and increasmoral desolation that has come ing the sum of human knowledge, over such a people, than over the and advancing its standard so physical ruin that has been visited high, as to win the admiration of upon their innocent victims. No the world. lawless rapacity, no heartless cruelty should mark the history of a na- progress of its sons and daughters tion, whose proud banner should in science and literature. float unstained by crime. that banner as it "floats over the nal, adorned with names that were land and over the sea "should be not born to die, gives imperishupborne by stalwart and virtuous able glory to a nation. Eloquence arms, and every rustle of its and poetry, science and art, sculpample folds should proclaim "glory ture and painting, colleges and to God, and good-will to man."

glory of a nation, consists not in people. Wise statesmen, prothe extent of its territory, the found philosophers, eloquent oravariety of its scenery, the great- tors, poets that move with a Milness of its resources, nor yet in tonic tread, and artists of faultits vast numbers, its extensive less skill, are stars of the first conquests, its physical courage or magnitude, and of radiant beauty, victorious arms. It is only when adorning the national sky with war is tempered by the influence more than auroral splendors. Such of our holy religion, and when its stars were Homer and Milton, heroes are "soldiers of the Cross" Virgil and Shakspeare, Newton that war becomes tolerable. It and Bacon, and their light still is only when waged for the cause shines with a splendor which must of right, and in a manner to bring remain undimmed amidst innocent and helpless non-com- brighter with the lapse of ages. batants that war is ever commendable.

every vestige of animal and ag- and advance the mechanic arts,

4. A nation may glory in the But literature, rich, classic, and origiand academies, these are the We hold then that the true glory of a civilized and christian the least possible suffering upon revolutions of time, and must grow

5. The glory of a nation is in her wise laws, free constitution, 3. The glory of a nation is and good government; in the sefound in the industry and enter- curing of private rights, and prise of its citizens. Let the maintenance of public virtue; in citizens ever be on the alert to institutions, just and benevolent; fell the forests, to cultivate the in a press untrammeled and yet fields, to build the cities, establish free from licentiousness; and in a the highways, extend the com- pulpit, independent, pure, and merce, improve the agriculture, evangelical. It is not found in injustice, or oppression, in con- the precepts of an honored tice.

tue of the young men, and to the its glory, and gradually, spotless purity of the young surely, sinks to ruin. women, that we are to look for the glory of a nation. For, give fortunately yield to the temptato a nation, young men whose vir- tions that encompass youth, and tue is incorruptible, and whose in- become licentious, profane, infidel, telligence equals their virtue, and wanting in integrity, and destitute its glory is secure in all time to of moral principle, then "Ichamen are wanting in virtue, who written on all our walls. When are my jewels; the nation must altars or corrupt our sons. turn away from them in sorrow, lamentations. his eye; and who has forgotten So in every age, and in every fiscations and judicial murders; father, and rejected the counsel but in guarding the rights of all, that has fallen from maternal aiding every state and every citi- lips, is a blur upon humanity, a zen with the golden rule of jus- caricature of a man and the shame of his country. With such 6. It is to the incorruptible vir- young men, a country is bereft of

If our young men should un-A nation, whose young bod," the glory is departed, will be spend their days in idleness, and unhallowed lust and lawless pastheir nights in revelry; who are sion have eat out like a cancer restrained by no high moral prin- the noble and victorious princiciple, and who yield a ready ples which should govern the obedience to every appetite and youth of a nation; then, indeed, passion, must soon be degraded, may the Rachels weep over the though possessed of inexhaustible desolation of the land and the resources and occupying the high- ruin of their sons; then may the est position. Let the young men Davids raise their lamentations of the land be worshippers at the over their fallen Absaloms; then shrine of Bacchus, drinking to in- may the Heavens be hung in toxication, staggering along the black; and the funeral dirge of streets of the cities with blood- the nation be sung. Let gaunt shot eyes, bloated faces, inflamed and hungry famine, blighting pespassions, and stultified intellects, tilence and terrible war darken and instead of pointing as did the our homes and sadden our hearts, Roman matron, and saying these but let not impurity stain our

The glory of Israel was her virand lift a wail so sad and so loud tuous Joseph, her pure-minded as to fill the whole land with its Samuel, and her innocent shep-The young man herd boy. Persia retained her who has lost all shame, and feels glory as long as she could boast no remorse, and who is incapable of the temperance and purity of of the noble purpose and the high her sons. The Spartan youth, by resolve, who has effaced the seal their integrity, their self-denial, of Heaven from the brow and the their truth, their reverence for image of God from the heart, and age, as well as by their valor, quenched the fire of intellect in brought glory to Lacedemonia .-

country, the young men who could govern themselves, honor raged so fiercely must be made, their parents, obey the laws, re- if possible, to contribute to the sist temptation, and with un-national glory. It is the beauty of faltering fidelity, pursue the path our holy religion that it evokes of virtue, have been the glory of from crime and suffering some of the nation.

with shrinking modesty, spotless would be no patience, and withvirtue, gentle amiability, unwaver- out sin, there would be no foring firmness, and feminine tender- giveness. Misery evokes compasness, seek to honor and bless man, sion, and want calls out benevoand with consistent piety, to honor lence. Had man not fallen, Re-God, add to the glory of the na- demption had not been accompsoft and mellow light of the even- believed to be ing star, which like that of Beth- were not traitors. glory.

is found in the manly virtues of Republic. These principles had her sons, the purity of her daugh- descended to them from Jefferson ters, and in the unselfish patriot- and Madison, and had come bapism of both. It is found in an tized in the blood of the heroes unselfish devotion to the interests of 1776. During the struggle, the of the whole country, and in courage of our men, and the laws.

The terrible civil war which has the highest virtues of humanity. The young women too, who, If there were no suffering there Woman who knows her lished; had sin not abounded, sphere, and who is willing to oc- grace had not much more aboundcupy it, who does not seek with ed. So let the calamities of our masculine boldness to enter the cruel war add to the glory of the field, which has been allotted to nation. Let us of the South, who man, who could not mingle in the have been the greatest sufferers in strife of politics, nor be found the struggle, add most to the with brazen effrontery, delivering glory of the nation, by a ready lectures, and discussing, before forgiveness of the past, by acmultitudes, topics of public in- cepting gracefully and patrioticalterest, but who seeks quietly and ly the decisions of war, and by humbly to fulfil her mission, devoting ourselves earnestly and is at once the crown of her parents, faithfully to the arts of peace. the boast of her countrymen, and The more we pursue this course. the glory of her nation. The the more we add to the glory of lustre of woman's virtues is not being an American citizen. Our like the dazzling radiance of the heroes fought and failed; they sun, shining at noon, with cloud- fought for principle, and struggled less splendor; but is like the with manly courage for what they right. Treason lehem, is the emblem of man's is not to be charged upon the peace, and the symbol of God's noble men, who fought for principles which were hallowed by as-Finally, the glory of a nation sociation with the Fathers of the abiding by the constitution and patient endurance of our women placed Southern character side by And in like manner we lay upon now and forever." the same altar the refinement and side with the greatest heroes the purity, the polish and piety, the world had ever known. The sun patience and forbearance of as never shone on a grander man noble women as God ever gave to than was Stonewall Jackson.- bless man. Will the North ac-A purer patriot never adorned cept the offering? Will they rethe pages of history than was, ject the light which now pours its and than is Robert E. Lee .- glorious effulgence from our South-Great in victory, great in de- ern sky? Will they seek to bring feat, and now greatest in peace. infamy upon names, which the Like him, are thousands of Muse of history has already the soldiers of the South; and proclaimed among the fairest on like him, they are adding to her roll, and as immortal as the lustre of the American name, bright? No; let the Union be by their endurance of misfortune, restored, let Andrew Johnson by their lofty bearing and deep unite together, in holy bonds, the devotion to the land we love .- victorious North and the defeated We offer here and now to the South, let integrity govern the one national flag, the energy, talent, and generosity the other, and our learning, genius, patriotism and national glory shall be like our integrity of the sons of the South. Union, "one and inseparable, more dry weather than we sup- ening their tissues and thus pre-

THE LEAVES OF PLANTS-THEIR STRUCTURE AND FUNCTIONS .-NATURE'S PROVISIONS AGAINST THE EFFECTS OF DROUGHTS.

Some years ago during a dry pose-that they have the means season, a friend observed that his of adjusting and adapting themcotton was so much injured by selves to the variable conditions drought, that if there was no rain by which they are surrounded, in a week, it need not rain again and that it is more often in dry for him this season, as his crop than in wet seasons that the best would be past help. It did not crops are made. We see the earth rain for ten weeks; and in the becoming dry and parched, the fall after harvest, he was obliged leaves drooping, the rapid luxuto confess that he had made a bet- riant growth arrested, and we cry ter crop than usual, much to the out for more rain. We too easily amusement of those who heard his take the alarm and imagine they lamentations in the summer, and are suffering, when on the contrahis own discomfiture as a prophet. ry, they are benefited by the This anecdote is mentioned to change, receiving strength and show that plants can really stand vigor from the bright sun, harduseful purposes of life-the bear- this is merely a term by which we ing of fruit instead of the empty mean the God of nature. Not a and boastful display of foliage.

moisture is necessary to a healthy too common use of that Reverend condition of vegetation; and rains Name. at certain intervals are required The leaves, -the foliage of to keep up this moisture, but we plants,--the lungs and stomach of too often anticipate this period; the vegetable kingdom! how and had we our own will in regu- varied in shape, size and adornlating this supply, there would ment !- magnificent in their agdoubtless be more frequent de- gregate, wonderful in their indifrom too much moisture.

the same time, a rebuke to our delicate organs of vision? entrusted to our sapient selves.

Scarcely any two table kingdom. would say.

as a wise master-builder, to pro- great Master hand. be content." But when we speak gums, -- aromatic flavors and paring themselves for the more of Nature, let us not forget that Power or an Agency in itself, but Of course a proper amount of a phrase by which we avoid the struction to the growing crops viduality! Behold in their color the beneficent adaptation to the It would afford a curious com- eye. What other hue could have mentary on our ignorance, and at been selected so grateful to the presumption, if, for one season, few grains of Chlerophyll, deposited the regulating of the clouds were in each of the minute cells of the leaf, accomplishes this work .-How soon would there be a real This coloring matter is never or fancied collision of interests. absent, except in some few eccen-"More rain" one would cry .- tric characters that draw their "No! let us have clear weather, sustenance from other plants, until the grass is killed " another parasites and pirates of the vegewould agree as to the times;—and And these leaves, so variable even on the same farm, the diffi- in size and shape ! how beautifulculty would arise of satisfying the ly do they obey the law of their conflicting claims of different being! how eloquently do they fields or different parts of the plead for the one designing archisame field. It is well for us that tect that has superintended their man, with his clashing interests structure! One general modeland short-sighted judgment, shall one universal plan to prove one not be "masters of the situation." designing mind, modified in end-We propose to speak of the pre- less complications to exhibit the cautions which Nature has taken inexhaustable resources of the

vide plants with a means of re- The foliage of vegetation,-the sisting the effects of drought, and great Laboratory of Nature in to furnish them with regulating which are concocted all the varimachinery by which they can ous products of the vegetable adapt themselves to outward cir- kingdom-wholesome food and cumstances ;-and "in whatever deadly poisons,-luscious fruit condition they are, therewith to and nauseous drugs-spices and

18 po

an

are ele

sm tu

tex

an fu

th sid di

cu

wi

the tu

en

du

we un

for its

th ne

wl

to wi

ele

dis ve

his

th no

ca su wl

ne

of sk op

tai

m

re

commerce,-the moving power of whose limits we cannot enter. the world's activity!

work silently, mysteriously. By does so perfectly, its great apday and night, in sunshine and in pointment in the economy of life. rain, its manifold operations are we cannot but admire. carried on:-and conducted with lates the effects.

products?

in mind that there is an external horizon,--an outward circle, ly- appearance and etherial odors,-textile fabrics and extend our vision, but it is only building materials,—the sinews of to see another horizon beyond,

This endless diversity in the This vast machinery is ever at vegetable kingdom, fulfilling as it

The many myriads of animated an exactness and precision which creatures that inhabit our globe. baffles all our efforts to penetrate find here their proper and necesthe mysterious, almost sentient sary food, and without it, animal agency, which prescribes and regu- life would be extinct. It attests the goodness of the beneficent Here we see growing side by Creator, who gives not life only, side, the wholesome fruit and the but with it also, enjoyment and deadly poison, the most fragrant happiness. We see the evidence perfume and the most fetid odors, of this bountiful providence in the each nourished by the same soil, rich fruits of the temperate rewarmed by the same sun, watered gions, and in the delicate aroma by the same rain, fanned by the and spicy perfumes of the tropics; same breeze, yet each within the and in all, a vegetation suited to sphere of its own instinct silently their wants. He gives to man a working out its own pre-ordained sense of the beautiful in nature, and thus appeals to his higher life. Can we penetrate these myste- In the profusion of flowers of ries, and expose to human view, every hue which deck our fields the secret workings of their hid- and forests; in those beautiful den organisms? Can we know ornaments of our gardens, surwhy the crude nourishment taken passing in chaste design, or in up from the common mother be- brilliant colors, all the skill of the low, when passed through the artists brush, He seems offering transmutating alembic of the to His rational creatures a source leaves, shall give us such varying of pure delight, and by thus making cheerful his home, to lure him Human ingenuity has accom- away from the strife of his own plished much, and is still at work passions, to seek for calmness and in the field which promises rich serenity of mind amid these emrewards, but we must ever bear blems of purity, chastity and love.

If this endless variety in the structure of ing beyond that which bounds our plants, be matters of wonder, how ordinary vision, which it is not much more so when we are told given to man to penetrate. By by the chemist, that on analyzing laborious investigation, analysis, the plant, there are only a few observation, comparison, scrutiny, elementary bodies, which in varywe may enter the inner circle and ing proportions, go into the comand that all plants whatsoever, of Life and can proceed no farther. are composed of these few simple In the presence of this unseen elements, in combination with a power, which pervades alike the ture of the leaf and learn its awe. texture, its organization, its parts and the mechanical and chemical it, as it appears to the naked eye. functions they perform, but of At first glance we see that there that mysterious power which pre- are two very distinct materials sides over, and controls the in- which make up its substance, in dividual life, which gives the pe- the frame work of ribs which, culiar and essential qualities, and passing through the centre, ramify with unerring precision, akin to in all directions, giving strength the instinct of intelligent crea- and rigidity to all its form;-and tures, prepares within itself the the softer and darker green subembryo seed which is to repro- stance which compose the interduce itself in endless succession, vening spaces, and known as the we know nothing. We call this parenchyma. unseen power vitality or vital both these structures, are simple its manifestations. It belongs to modified in various ways. those inscrutable mysteries connected with the great First Cause, we have what is called the vascuwhich it is not permitted to man lar or longitudinal system of to penetrate.

with his blow-pipe and powerful the latter, the cellular or horizonelectric battery, the chemist may tal system, soft and flexible. These dissolve the wonderful fabric of latter contain the Chlerophyll or vegetable compounds, and with green coloring matter of leaves. his delicate tests, may search out their constituents, but he knows several other divisions, which the not how again to reconstruct. He naked eye fails to detect. rebuild again.

position of its whole structure, the threshold of the great mystery small quantity of earthy matter. vegetable and the animal king-We may investigate the struc- dom, he bows in reverence and

We take up a leaf and examine The original of force, because we know it only by cells, but the cell-structure is

In the former, the ribs or veins, cells,-elongated, tough and rigid, With his crucible and his retort, giving strength and hardness;-in

Under the microscope we find can tell us the constituents of In a cross or vertical section, sugar, and the very proportions in we find, composing the central which they are united, but he has substance of the leaf, cells more never been able to make one atom or less compressed and flattened of sugar. By his ingenious and by pressure, but always with inskilful devices, he is enabled to tervening spaces, or air passages, open the fair casket, to study its where the edges of the cells are curious workmanship, and ascer- not in close contact. On the uptain the materials of which it is per and under surface is a layer made,-but here his power ceases. of thickened and closely com-He is thwarted in all his efforts to pressed cells. This is the Epider-He has reached mis which incloses the more loose 1867.

and t

eral s

the n

it is e

of pla

the s heav

these

be br

next mois

wet a

a cor orga these

then

bed t

abov

capil

are 1

ting

the]

effec

its le

affor

mois

with ther

the thes

don

alis

It

W

texture within and protects it escape of moisture by evaporafrom the direct influence of heat tion. But when the supply fails, and cold, and of excessive dryness and the parenchyma begins to be or moisture.

from the cells beneath. They are tween the external air and the adjusting machinery. cells; and occupy both surfaces of the leaf.

merged, absent. are extremely forming an elliptical opening.- the plant-the earth for man and "When moistened, these guardian man for the earth. close the orifice. The use of this downward. remain open, and allow the free ascend by capillary attraction, exhausted, the guardian cells, at On the surface of this epidermis least equally affected by the dryare a number of Stemates or ness, promptly collapse, and by breathing pores (as they may be closing these thousands of apercalled),—mechanical contrivances tures, check the drain the moment for regulating the evaporation it becomes injurious to the plant."

So far therefore as the leaf is openings in the surface which con- concerned, it is endowed by nanect with the air cavities or in- ture with the means of resisting tercellular spaces within, thus af- and mitigating the injurious effects fording a free communication be- of too much dryness by this self-

If we examine into the effects of drought upon the soil, we shall be In plants when leaves float on led to admire no less the proofs of the water, as in the Water Lily design exhibited there. Throughand other aquatics, the stemates out the kingdom of nature we see are confined to the upper surface mutual connection and dependonly;-and in leaves entirely sub- ence between all objects-action They and reaction, relations, adaptaminute; and tions, which prove them all to be vary in different plants from 1,000 the work of one designing mindto 150,000 to the square inch.— all made for each other, and only These perforations are situated fulfilling their office when these between certain crescent shaped relations are established; the eye cells of the epidermis, their con- for light and light for the eye-the cave surfaces coming together and plant for the soil, and the soil for cells change their form, becoming As rain falls upon the ground more crescentic as they become it is absorbed by the porous soil, more turgid, thereby separating and sinks down gradually, thus in the middle and opening a free relieving the roots of that excess communication between the outer which would be injurious. Rain air and the interior of the leaf .- water is always changed into car-As they become drier, they shorten bonic acid gas, which enables it and straighten, so as to bring the more readily to dissolve the minersides of the two into contact and al matter it finds in its progress These are carried mechanism will be readily under- down and lodged in the subsoil.stood. So long as the leaf is in a As soon as the surface begins to moist atmosphere, and is freely dry, a reverse action takes placesupplied with sap, the stemates the moisture from below begins to and to carry up with it these min- great presiding Intelligence, and eral salts held in solution. When is led onward to seek out and inthe moisture reaches the surface, vestigate three works. it is either taken up by the roots And these things which appear of plants, or evaporates, leaving minute and trivial should give us the salts in the soil. The next the more confidence, inasmuch as heavy rains carry down much of they are proofs of his power and capillary attraction.

alist finds unerring proofs of the looked or neglected."

these mineral matters, but only to goodness even to the inanimate be brought up again during the and insensible objects of his crenext drought, by the ascending ation. "If He so clothe the grass The alternations of of the field, shall he not much wet and dry weather thus keep up more" care for man, made in his a constant interchange of these in- own image? As good old Paley organic materials. It is often the puts it-"Under this stupendous case that the subsoil is rich in Being we live. Our happiness, these valuable compounds. It our existence is in his hands. All then becomes an inexhaustable we expect must come from him .bed for the supply of vegetation Nor ought we to feel our confiabove by this simple process of dence insecure. In every nature, and in every portion of nature We see therefore that droughts which we can descry, we find atare not without their compensa- tention bestowed upon even the ting benefits. That the plant has minutest parts. The hinges in the power of resisting much of its the wing of an earwig and the effects through the machinery of joints of its antennæ" (or the its leaves, whilst the porous soil breathing-pores on the surface of affords a passage upwards of the the smallest leaf) "are as highly moisture from below, charged wrought as if the Creator had with mineral ingredients, and nothing else to finish. We see no thereby keeping up the fertility of signs of diminution of care by multiplicity of objects, or of dis-It is in the contemplation of traction of thought by variety .these evidences of creative wis- We have no reason to fear theredom and goodness that the natur- fore our being forgotten or over-

"STAND IN THY LOT."

Shall He who formed the ear, And gave thee eyes to see, Not fashion sounds to cheer And light to gladden thee?

Beneath whose brooding wings The desert wells were nurst-Deny thee water-springs, And leave thy lip, athirst?

Nay! were thine upward aim The utmost stars on high, His hand who lit their flame, Can lend thee wings to fly!

Be steadfast in thy day! As is thy strength, thy task; Who gave the heart, alway Gives all the heart can ask.

18 the So ha

for les ma

bri

ife

we

fev

res

col ty off

of

the

the aw bet

an

ap

the lau

sol

bei

do tra

me

un

dic

bre

lin

thi

-

HUMORS OF THE MORGAN RAID INTO INDIANA AND OHIO.

SECOND PAPER.

to destroying the Ohio and Mis- over in that locality. sissippi Railroad, then a thoroughcertain bridges, &c.

force, and the bridges were-safe. his bread was buttered!

The first bridge at which we of weapon, from long rifles to pitch- Bridge. away. Their cannon was a brass "guerilla chief." signal gun of the smallest size not over ten inches long, perhaps sun was setting, a new impulse -and it, too, like the one brought was added to the excitement by

GEN. MORGAN had passed with to bear on Gen. Morgan at Branhis force of less than four thou-denburg, had been captured or sand men, some sixty miles into stolen, and sent home from the Indiana, and had taken the towns war. At the time of which I of Corydon and Salem; and ru- write, it was claimed as the propmors flew over the country to the erty of a Gen. McMillen, who figeffect that he was aiming to work ured somewhat around New Orstill further North, with a view leans, long after the fighting was

With these arrangements and fare of vast importance to the fixtures, our Hoosier friends felt Federal army. So a squad of perfectly secure; and so they inmen-the writer of this among dulged loudly in their defiance of them-was dispatched forthwith Morgan and his four thousand to the railroad in question, with conscripts, as they were pleased instructions to rouse the people to call his men. They were, to and gather them to the defence of use their own language, "jest spilin' for a fight." On reaching our department would give them more pleasure we found that we might as well than to see the old horse-thief unhave been kept at home, for the dertake to capture that bridge!people were already out in full They'd show him which side of

In an hour or so after our arrimade our august appearance was val, a locomotive came up the over White River. It was guard- track with word that Morgan had ed by about three hundred brave worked out as far as Little Orlooking Hoosiers, dressed in every leans; had captured the place, style known to the fashions, and and was now actually marching armed with every conceivable kind directly for the White River And immediately the forks. They were entrenched and exclamations of defiance, and had a cannon. Their earth-works clamoring in favor of a fight, consisted of a thin ridge of loose ceased; and many a tall Hoosier sand thrown up as lightly as pos- turned pale and became restless. sible, with a row of small stones It was the first time they had reresting along on top of it to pre- alized that there was really a posvent the wind from blowing it sibility of meeting with the great

A little later, and just as the

V.

ınor

he

I

op-

ig-

Orvas

nd

elt in-

of

nd

sed

to est ng

are ın-

!-

of ri-

the

ad

Or-

ce,

ng

ver he nd ht. ier SS. reoseat he lse by the arrival of a recruit from ing the better to hear the ap-Southward, who swore that he proaching enemy, a crashing had seen Morgan and his whole sound arose from the dense woods force, and they were now within within a few hundred paces of us, less than six miles of us, and which fairly shook heaven and marching at double-quick for the earth. And forthwith the clank-bridge.

ifest itself among our men. We River, not the effect of men enwere a divided force; for, while a gaged in deadly combat, but profew appeared to be good soldiers, duced by men who had concluded ready to stand up to the work, to adopt the old saying of come what would, a large majority evinced an inclination to start off for the nearest town in quest leaving, of course, the third word of supplies; or to straggle out into of the first line out of the questhe woods in a direction that went the furthest from Little Orleansdo, had to remain.

It wasn't long till we heard the than forty miles! tramp, tramp, tramp of Morgan's men coming, sure enough,-or, ranks filled up, and we were all until many said they heard it-I very much grieved that we had breathless, and I may say, tremb- with the great Guerrilla Chiefling suspense. In the midst of tain. this, when all had stopped breathing of arms might have been heard Great uneasiness began to man- at that particular bridge on White

> "He who fights and runs away, Will live to fight another day," tion.

It was a rich affair, that ingloaway from the buzz of camp, the rious skedaddle. There was scarcebetter to-hear Morgan, of course, ly a corporal's guard left. But and to apprise the guard of his rattle, rattle, tramp, tramp, on approach, also, of course. But came the charging squadrons: the guard opposed them in their when lo! a hand-car came in laudable purposes, and the brave sight! Yes, a hand-car, and nothsoldiers, who had, but a few hours ing more! and we learned that before, boasted what they could Morgan had taken another route. and had not been nearer to us

> The deserters came back, the It was a moment of not had a rough and tumble fight

> > (TO BE CONTINUED)

hou

the

Cat

plai

the

tole

the par

lurl

dep

80 alth

nat

riva

bele

con

to t

Pu

En

me

diff

Sta

Ch

cop

Ev

ion

ria

we

rig

sec

per

we

pro

the

cal

An

ing

the

rep kn

pro

of

po

Ch:

E

JOHN MILTON.*

away from the bowers of the Muses, These were sincere advocates at to the dusty arena of British pol- once of constitutional right, and ities in the 17th century, and to of monarchical government; and the thorny paths of history. But while they did not regard prelacy we may venture to encourage him as of the essence of a scriptural with the promise of smoothing church-order, and were not so these rough ways for him, so that principled against Presbyterianif any feet are lacerated by them, ism, as to be incapable of sincerely they shall be those of his pioneers, adopting it, if it appeared necesand not his own.

The career of Milton as a public man exactly explains the true nature of that great party in Church and State, known as the Puritan, and of the wide differences which existed within it. It was stated that when the Long Parliament met, November 3rd, 1640, it was almost unanimous in in its demand for the redress of grievances proceeding from the abuse of the royal prerogative .-But it then contained three avowed parties. The smallest was that of the King, of Laud, and of Strafford, the party of the high They were, in the prelatists. State, the advocates of pure, unlimited monarchy, and in religion the assertors of the divine right prelates, for the very being of a They were shrewdly suspected by the moderate party, of a secret design to bring in despotism and Catholicism: a charge which the extreme liberals fully believed; and which, in the light of history, appears manifestly true. Next, there was the palians, embracing at that time,

THE reader must now follow us the great majority of both houses. sary for the country's welfare. they preferred a mild Episcopacy. as an advantageous and suitable institution for England as she then was. This party was well represented in the great Hampden. The third party, larger in numbers than the first, but far smaller than the second, was that the Presbyterians. These looked to the established Church of their sister kingdom of Scotland, where Presbytery was regularly and legally established by the constitution, as presenting their preferred model. Hence, as Scotland was then almost unanimously in arms against Charles, for his despotic encroachments: it was inevitable that this party in England, when their own quarrel and necessity of a hierarcy of with the king became pressing, as well as the moderate party, should look to the Scots as their natural allies. The English Presbyterians were avowed, and unquestionably sincere monarchists, but determined to preserve and increase the constitutional limits on the royal power. In church affairs, they avowed no design of banishing party of the moderate Episco- Episcopacy from the English Establishment, but loudly demanded. first, that the hierarchy should not be represented in the upper house, second, that the religion of motion for redress of grievances, the State should be purged from (Nov. 1640.) Catholic tendencies, then so plainly manifest; and third, that pass, that under the name of their people should enjoy full Puritans, all our religion is toleration in England. the bosom of this Presbyterian words against Jesuits, all Popery latent and unavowed, is countenanced. lurked the little element of In- squares his action by any Rule. dependency, which was destined either Divine or Humane, he is a although always a minority in the governed by the King's Laws, he nation, to overpower both its is a Puritan: he that will not do belonged, perhaps at first semi- him do, he is a Puritan: Their consciously.*

^{*} Continued from page 45%.

Puritan. In the mouth of an Party of the kingdom," English Episcopalian of 1640, it the royalist party, when they by their principles. repetition, we only cite one, less tering the government,

"They have so brought it to But in branded; and under a few hard Whosoever so wonderfully to emerge, and Puritan: whosoever would be To this element Milton whatsoever other Men would have great Work, their Master-piece, But something more is needed, now is to make all those of the to the understanding of the term Religion, to be the suspected

The meaning which the epithet meant a vast aggregate of most Puritan bore in the mouth of the different parties in Church and Royalist, may be best explained State, including the National by the historical usage of other Church of Scotland, all the Epis- terms of reproach. Thus, in the copalians of distinct and fixed 18th century the word Methodist. Evangelical or Protestant opin- applied to the evangelical party ions, all the English Presbyte- in the English Establishment, rians, all those politicians who meant not a Wesleyan, but a man were sticklers for constitutional who conscientiously regulated his right, and, of course, the obscure morals by a methodus. It was the sectaries afterwards called Inde- taunt of a relaxed and unprincipendents. But these last, as they pled party against those who were least numerous, were then tacitly shamed their lack of prinprobably least in the minds of ciple, by professing to live strictly called their opponents Puritans. United States the time was, when Among many testimonies confirm- those who asserted the fundamening this statement, too familiar to tal principles of the constitution the well-informed reader to need as the practical rules for adminisknown, though exceedingly ap- branded as "Abstractionists."propriate. It is from the speech The Puritans were simply the of Sir Benjamin Rudyard, in sup- Methodistæ and Abstractionists of port of the celebrated Mr. Pym's 1640. Says Rapin Thoyras, (Vol. xi. p. 518.) "They" (Charles I, * See Rapin Thoyras, Bk. xx. 15. and his party) "believed not only Charles I. (Ed. Lond, 1731, pp. 24, 25, 61 that all the Puritans were enemies

the

dis

ca

to an rie

ha

be in

In

de

W

p cl

n

to

c

to monarchy; but also that all untarily calling him to teach or deal farther. scribed sufficiently. his pretensions: the laity by vol- all. For, the proper tendency of those who were against a despotic rule, and the clergy by voluntarily Power were Puritans. This made raising him by ordination, to their Charles I. resolve to ruin all such class. This doctrine of vocation as were not submissive enough the Independents fatally marred, to his Will, by confounding them by discarding the concurrence of all under the name of Puritans." the church, and clergy, and teach-It can be easily understood why ing that every believer who prothe Independent party, at the be- fessed to feel the motion of the ginning of the great struggle, Holy Ghost, was duly qualified to should act with the Presbyterians; teach. They also threw off all because the latter, although mon- ecclesiastical subordination, dearchists, were striving against a claring that there was no such despotic monarchy and hierarchy. thing as clerical or ecclesiastical Thus they were going, for the power, in any form, regulative of present, in the direction the In- the whole Christian body. With dependents designed to go: only, them, any company of worshipthe latter intended to go a great pers who chose to associate to-And hence, this gether, were independent and sutemporary cooperation did not preme; and they rejected the leprove that their principles were gitimate control of a representanot radically different. The In-tive Presbytery or Synod, as being dependent sect, originating with as verily Antichrist, as a Prelate. the little colony of Brownists in It is true, that the monstrous re-Holland, were disorganizers in rults of such a system of anarchy Church and State. In politics made a part of the sect recoil, as they were radical democrats; by to a part of their dogmas. The which one word, they are de- little cluster of Independents who In Church had found their way into the Westorder, they discarded the great minster Assembly, headed by doctrines of "vocation" and rule Godwyn and Burroughs, preon which all the Reformed Church- sented to the Parliament in 1644, es had built their systems, as on a statement of their opinions, in a corner stone. That doctrine is, which they protest that they that the limited Church power admit the ordination of ministers which Jesus Christ, the Head of by ministers, the use of ruling the Church, has deposited in hu- elders, the sacraments, and a conman hands, is in the clergy whom gregational church discipline by he has called, through the voice censure or exclusion. It is also of his people and Spirit, to this true that Independents, both in And this vocation is England, and in New England, recognized only where the candi- have usually found themselves date for office feels himself moved practically impelled, by the very by godly and Scriptural desires absurdity of their own first prinfor the work, and both the orders ciples, to borrow so much of Presin the Church endorse and approve byterianism, in order to exist at disintegrate civil and ecclesiasti- in the sovereignty of God's will cal society, and bring everything and providence, make each man a to chaos. And in both countries, god to himself; and assign no and in the 17th and 19th centu- other force to law, than the capries, a large number of those who rice of that aggregate meb of lawhave adopted these opinions have less integers, which happens to been continually drifting into one possess the physical power. or another absurdity, disorganiz- We repeat, that the Presbyte-

their own premises is utterly to ethical foundation for allegiance

ing every foundation of order .- rians, although temporarily hav-In short, the most moderate In- ing the political adhesion of the dependents, represented by God- Independents, held principles eswyn and Burroughs, retain the sentially different. They were a principle of their church-radical- recognized branch of that great ism, by repudiating all general communion known as the "Rechurch control, and making any formed," to which the Anglican number of sectaries who associate church belonged. From the lattogether, no matter how few, or ter they only differed in one essenhow schismatical, or how extrav- tial; the prelatical headship for agant, a legitimate and supreme their church order. But while church power, with an inherent they did not recognize the Aposclaim to all the powers of ordina-tolic succession through prelatition, sacraments, and discipline, cal Bishops, they held firmly to and irresponsible to everything the necessity of a clerical succesbeneath the skies. It is no won- sion, and of a Scriptural authorider that such a system displayed ty regulative of the whole church, its innate tendency to revert per- residing in the clergy. While the petually to anarchy, in the in- Episcopalians sought this general stances of the Levellers, and regulative power in a hierarchy of Fifth Monarchists of the Com- Bishops and Archbishops, the monwealth, and the Women's Presbyterians placed it in repre-Rights, Free Love and Abolition- sentative courts of more general, ist parties of New England. It or of universal jurisdiction, is obvious that the only political called Synods and General Ascreed which could affiliate with semblies. And they taught in such a religion, was the most common with the whole Protestradical form of democracy. In ant world, that the foundation of their 'so-called' churches, the allegiance in both Church and people were a spiritual democra- State, is the supreme will of God: of cy, and the pastor a spiritual which will regular expression is to demagogue. So, in civil affairs, be obtained, first in the Holy Scriptthese high religionists were found ures, and then in the combined adopting precisely the atheistic voice of the constituted human auand impious principles of the thorities, and of the people, utter-Mountain in the French Assem- ed through the appointed channels. bly: which ignore the very idea of Thus they aimed to find the goldlegitimate authority, discard all en mean between the principles of despotism, and those of an- archists. We know that the oparchy. It is manifest that their posite is often asserted; that King Episcopalians and Catholics.

with a literal democracy. The tion of the order of facts. British Presbyterians were undoubtly sincere and steadfast mon-system was as truly one of sub- James I. embodied his opinion of ordination, of order, and of legiti- the incompatibility of their sysmate authority, as that of the tem with monarchy, in the moderate Episcopalians. And this apophthegm "No Bishop, no is not only inference, but a his- King." The Presbyterians would torical fact. Just so soon as the willingly have avowed this max-Independent party found it their im, if modified so as to read: "No interest to withdraw from them, Bishop, no Despot." It is true they uniformly assailed them with that the Stuart Dynasty held this the same charges of tyranny, opinion as their inheritance, to which they uttered against the their latest hour. It is true that the Presbyterians in the Long Par-It is obvious also, that the ge- liament were persistently charged nius of Presbyterianism was such by Charles I. with a secret puras might properly affiliate either pose of establishing a commonwith a constitutional monarchy, wealth. But we shall present iror with a regular aristocratical refragable evidence of the opporepublic; while it had no affinity site, at the cost of some anticipa-

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

LOVE'S LAW.

The classical people were certainly queer, And did many a comical thing; Yet their doings, if sifted entirely clear, Will some moral undoubtedly bring.

A fanciful fancy of their's I relate, And the truth, which it covers, display; Endeavoring its innermost meaning to state To whoever may list to the lay.

These Ancients created a beautiful God, And crowned him with myrtle and rose, Then placed in his soft, snowy fingers a rod With the which he did just as he chose.

He reigned on the mountains, he ruled o'er the sea, And he governed the heavens above; And naught might presume to dispute the decree Of the powerful deity Love! *

Love loved and was loved by the loveliest girl,
That the earth at that season had seen;
As pure as some snowily glittering pearl In the depths of the ocean serene.

He loved, and he wooed, and he won, and he made This most exquisite maiden his bride, Yet on her a stringent injunction he laid, Lest a terrible woe should betide.

When night draped the earth in a soft, starry shade, He would leave his bright throne in the sky, Still crowned, and in royal apparel arrayed, To the arms of his darling to fly.

Yet never a moment that darling might gaze On the face of her lover divine, Save when on his glorious beauty the rays Of faint flickering star-beams should shine.

Love's law was obeyed and the moments flew fast Round the silvery circle of Time, Till Pysche too curious, grew sinful at last— Disobedience to Husbands is crime!

One night she held close to his myrtle-wreathed head, As asleep he dreamed happily on,

A lamp.—Love awoke in an instant, and fled And forever and ever was gone!

This lesson enwrapped in the story I find;— To be happy, obey it we must—
"To keep Love we must always be partially blind, And take half of his treasures —— on trust!"

SKETCH OF GOVERNOR ALLEN OF LOUISIANA.

In the year 1838, the writer of numbers. Of these, one was this was standing before the door Henry W. Allen, the subject of of one of the dormitories at Marion College, Mo., engaged with a feet ten inches high, with a fine group of fellow students in discussing some of the questions which ed us very favorably. There were ordinarily engage the attention of College boys, when the hack from the Old Dominion, in College, and the nearest town arrived, bringthese those of us who belonged to that ing an accession of two to our squad soon ascertained that he was sought an acquaintance with him, in the literary society, Before His father removed from Prince leaving college, this fellow student Edward county, Va., (a county addressed him a kind note, asking that gave Sterling Price and Joe. him, that as they were about to Johnston to the Confederacy,) and separate, perhaps never to meet settled in Richmond, Ray county, again, he would forget the past, Mo., when Henry was some fif- and not carry with him ill blood. teen years of age. Henry was plac- He rejected the tender of reconed in a store in Lexington, Mo., a ciliation. He was not yet schoolplace afterwards prominent in the ed and disciplined by contact with annals of the war. The life of a the world, to make him the man merchant, however, did not suit he became. There were in him young Allen, and he left the coun- all the elements of greatness and ter when about seventeen years nobleness, but he had never 'yet old, to pursue his studies in col- been chastened by experience to lege, looking forward to the bar know and feel that little peccadilas his profession. In college he los should not be allowed to sepwas one of the most diligent stu- arate chief friends. He had not dents I ever knew. He was fond been in Mississippi two weeks, beof public speaking, and while not fore he wrote back a note of humneglecting his text-books, took a ble apology to this same student, prominent part in the discussions especially regretting that he had made an argument before the of his friend looking to a reconment with one of his fellow stu- ond error of life reformed. dents, about some matters connec- Young Allen began his career from "the land we loved," and ted with a controversy conducted in society. On one occasion, he ungenerously rejected the tender Judge of the Township in favor ciliation. Thus, was one error of of the rights of the students of life atoned for, and rectified. The college, which he thought had same was the case towards his been infringed upon, and gained honored father. He was too much great credit for his first public under the influence of impulse, forensic effort. He did not com- but at the same time was as genplete the course of study at col- erous a soul as ever lived. The lege. It must be admitted that next thing he did was to write a he was disposed to be a little ex-long and humble letter to his father travagant in his expenditures .- making amends for his too hasty His habits of dress, cultivated in a conduct in leaving college. He store, made his expenditures ex- was in the world now, he was to ceed the average of his fellow stu- carve out his on destinies, and dents, and his father, finding that in contact with strangers he had he greatly exceeded his allow-learned to value the fond affection ances, took occasion to remonstrate of the loved ones at home. Of This offended him, course the breach was healed, and and he left college to seek his for- the first vacation in which he tune in the South. It so occurred, could spare time, he paid a visit too, that he had had a disagree- to his home. Thus was the sec-in Mississippi by teaching in or- for some cause or other, went by der to support himself, and also the nick-name of "Hoss Allen," to study law. After the usual and College students are fond of time spent in preliminary studies giving nick-names to their fellows. he was admitted to the bar, and We gave him this, and he always rose to distinction. Here again, went by that name. As I had "the rash humor which his recognized my friend instanter, I distant relative of Allen's, he took native State. the quarrel up, which led to a representative ensued, Allen received a slight adopted State. the affair.

taste of military life.

ginia Springs. souri, by the name of Allen, who, he had command of a regiment mother gave him," made him for- called to him by his old soubriget that he was not called upon to quet. I presume he had not heard redress every wrong, and especial- it for ten years, but like the old ly that a newspaper squib had war-horse when he hears the better not be noticed, than to lead sound of the trumpet, he recogto a personal conflict. It so oc- nized the name, and came runcurred that that non-descript, ning to greet me with the exclahunchback, Tom Hunt, of Penn- mation-"Who in the world is it sylvania, "a man of infinite hu- that calls me by my old College mor who was wont to set the nick-name!" Of course it was audience in a roar" as a temperance- not long before he knew who it speaker, visited the town in which was that addressed him thus Allen resided in Mississippi, and familiarly, and many pleasant delivered a lecture. Some one of hours we spent together. He was the Editors of the town perpetra- now a married man, and he and ted a squib at Hunt's expense, his wife were spending the sumand as the lecturer had married a mer in the mountains of his old He was also the of Yalabusha challenge, and in the conflict that county, in the legislature of his wound. He ever afterwards re- Years passed by-the storm of gretted that he had engaged in war had burst on Virginia. He was eager to mingle in the foray. The war with Mexico coming to strike for his home and native on, Allen raised a company and land. The first battle of Manassas joined our forces on the Rio had been fought. Crowds of sol-Grande, where he acquired his first diers were gathering to this scene of conflict to range themselves Years after this, the writer met under the Danners of Johnston his old friend at one of the Vir- and Beauregard. I was standing He was sitting at Gordonsville one day, and lookunder the rotunda, when looking ing at the trains as they passed over his shoulder, he saw a gen- crowded with soldiers, when who tleman reading a book, whom he should step off one of the cars but recognized as his old College mate. my old friend, dressed in a Colo-When in College we called him by nel's uniform. We exchanged familiar soubriquet, "Hoss."- hearty greetings. I asked him There was an old Judge in Mis- his destination. He told me regiment was incorporated in the cause of his death. army of the West. In the active From this time General Allen never could walk well, (we used to the gubernatorial chair. me into this world, and some how women of New Orleans. Brigadier General.

of Louisianians, stationed on Ship crutch, one leg, (that which had Island, but was on his way to re- received the slightest fracture) he port to General Beauregard .- considered entirely well. Alas! Soon after this General B. was he never recovered the use of the sent West and Colonel Allen's other entirely-nay, it was the operations of the Western army was never in the field. He had he played a conspicuous part, been for some years an honorable sharing all the tolls of that ardu- and influential citizen of Louisious campaign. When General ana; Had sympathized deeply Breckenridge attacked the enemy with the oppressed people of his at Baton Rouge, he was in the adopted State. They looked to thickest of the fight. Riding at him now as the man for the times, the head of his regiment, for he and placed him by acclamation in joke him about his gait in College) he justified their high opinion .he was shot through both his legs, No Governor in the whole Conand his horse killed under him. federacy was more energetic .-He was borne to the rear, and Every one read and remembers laid on a table to have his limbs the clarion notes of his inaugural amputated. Against this he pro- address. If Butler's hide were tested. "Gentlemen" said he to not as thick as a rhinoceros', he the Surgeons, "My Maker gave would have felt the barbed arrows me these pins when he brought of this young champion of the or other, I intend to take them message was in a different tone. with me when I go out of it. I It was calm, able, dignified, statesacquit you of all blame. I as- man-like. The one was the loud sume the responsibility. If I die clarion peal summoning the clan I take all blame myself, splinter to rally—the other the cool, deme up, and try to save my limbs." liberate orders of the commander They took him at his word, and to the men assembled on the field. splintered him up. He slowly be- He lost his earthly all in the war. gan to amend. For months he From being a man of princely was disabled from field duty. At wealth, when I heard from him length he had convalesced so far last at Shreveport, whither the as to visit the Capital of the "so- seat of Government of Louisicalled" Confederate States, where ana was removed, he had but a he received the commission of a single horse, and one servant, the He also, wreck of a magnificent estate.

while in Virginia, on this trip, It remains but to state that visited his old home in Prince Ed- when news reached him of the ward, and mingled with his rela- surrender of Lee and Johnston, tives and friends, many of whom in company with others whose had known him as a boy. He hopes were buried with the Conwas able to walk with the aid of a federacy, he went to Mexico .- I have seen several numbers of down and yielded his spirit up to his paper. It was conducted with God-another martyr to the "lost great ability. He seemed to cause" of his country. cherish great regard for the Em- His remains have been brought peror and Empress, who extended to Louisiana that they may rest a welcome to the exile, a welcome among the people he loved so well. that it seems they themselves No booming cannon was allowed to shall soon need from some friend- announce their arrival at New ly power. For more than a year, Orleans. But a nobler demonfrom his retreat in Mexico, Gov. stration was made than cannon Allen was able to watch the roar or muffled drum. Amid the events as they shaped themselves tears of thousands whom he loved in his native land. He loved his and for whom he died, his noble home, in the land of his exile .- form was laid to rest till the arch-At length the summons came to angel's trumpet shall awake it at join "the innumerable host" of that dread tribunal, where all the patriots that have gone "to the wrongs of earth shall be redressed. realm of shades." His wound never entirely healed. He left the city of Mexico, it is said, to seek surgical aid in France-

Here he edited the Mexican Times. but at Cordova he was stricken

"Green be the turf above thee Friend of my early days, None knew thee but to love thee, None named thee but to praise."

TWELVE MONTHS IN SPAIN.*

IT comes well here, in the order worse things and many better of incidents connected with the things than that favorite sport.

Fair, to notice the bull-fight But, chiefly, by way of apology, which ended the festivities of the let me say that it is always best to occasion. I have concluded, how- get the highest style in every art, ever, to pass that spectacle over even in the art of killing bulls .for the present; and it may be And it was at Seville I heard, that that some apology is due for this the famous Montes, the best sword course. I have never, indeed, in in Spain, celebrated in all books the first place, estimated Spanish of travels for twenty years before character by that splendid nation- my visit, had returned to the al game as much as we foreigners arena and was then engaged at are usually inclined to do-for Madrid. Let us wait, therefore, none of us seem to think of Spain till we have finished our bird'sor Spaniards without thinking eye view of the Peninsular, and also of the bull-fights. I believe, get back to the Capital, where, contrariwise, that Spain has many during the course of the summer, we shall often see this unmatch.

^{*} Continued from page 331.

ed swordsman in the ring. For and the conversation resulted, as of cattle.

TRIANA:

habitants. peditions.

it is not more certain that Napo- we hoped, in an invitation to go leon was the first slaver of men in. We found inside two other than that Montes is the first slayer women and two men. One of the women was young and pretty .-Her regular, delicately chiseled, I used sometimes to cross the sun-burnt features, her glossy Guadelquiver by its venerable raven hair, her fine piercing black bridge of boats, and spend an hour eyes would have made her a or two in Triana-a Gipsy Town beauty of any land, or of any immediately opposite Seville .- race. The men, rather youthful You see many of this strange in appearance, sat silent and untribe of people wandering over social to themselves in a corner. I was curious to see The first thing which excited resomething of their life and man- mark and (shall I add?) admiraners in a settlement almost ex- tion was a complexion and a color clusively their own. Triana looks of hair very unusual in Spain: wretched enough-wretched streets And they proceeded forthwith to -wretched huts-wretched in- fix my local habitation, which And worse than they placed in many countrieswretched. All is filth too.— yet missed America, after all.— Naked children, old men surly Indeed the extent and accuracy and gruff, old hags withered and of their geographical knowledge, witch-like, eye you through the surprised me much. They knew chinks or broken windows, silent- the names and relative positions ly and sinisterly, as you pass. - of most of the States in Europe, You never see anybody at work. and around the Mediterranean. You never hear the least stir of I asked how they came by their business. You wonder how they information? They arewered that live. The secret is, that a cer- some of them had traveled-but tain portion of the tribe, especial- they had learned most of what ly the younger part, is always off they knew from their own people, on distant expeditions, trafficking whom they had seen from those chiefly in horses, practising the various parts of the world. "The arts of palmistry, or pilfering Gipsies," they said, "are everygenerally, while the old and in- where, and brethren wherever fant class remain at home and they are." But of our Model subsist on the gains of these ex- Republic, they were wholly ignorant: and, in turn, became very On the occasion of one of my inquisitive of me concerning every visits, with a Spanish friend, anx- item of interest touching my ious to see more of Gipsy life country. Some of their questions than it was possible to see by were amusing: Were our people merely sauntering along the all fair complexioned and redstreets, we addressed the old and haired? How far distant was my ugly women sitting at the door of country, and how could one get a hut. They were communicative, there? Who was King? Had r k

a

ıl

-

-

-

r

1:

0

h

y

3,

W

18

e, ı.

ir

ıt

ıt

at

e, se

ıe

yer

el

0-ry

ry

ıy ns

le d-2y

et

ad

What language did we speak? dance to be. Had we fine horses; and finaltold them we had no Gipsies; be relied on. two things-but they persisted used. way of complaisance.

pay something for the sight. A ple. guitar was sent for; and soon a the whole performance. It was which she did with many signs we large cities and large rivers? not unlike what I fancy an Indian

I had purchased a few days bely, were there any Gipsies among fore a small pocket-dictionary of us? As well as I could, I grati- the Gipsey language. I took ocfied their attentive curiosity .- casion to use a word or two, curi-They seemed believing until I ous to see whether the book might They understood whereat they betraved symptoms the words; and immediately asked of incredulity, for which I in- how much I knew of their lanquired the cause, when they said, guage, and how I had acquired that a country with fine horses it! I assured them I knew nothand without Gipsies could not be. ing of it, and then displayed my I was not able to understand the dictionary as the source whence I necessary connection between these had derived the word or two I had They protested warmly that they always went together, and all together, that I could not and I had to yield the point by have depended for learning their language upon books, and said Meanwhile we had distributed repeatedly es mentira—"it is all a some cigars, and had ordered some lie"-meaning anything put down The two men now came in the books concerning the Gipsey out of their silence and their cor- speech. They said I could only The sociability was general learn their language by living and cordial. The chance seemed among them, which I thought opportune for seeing what I had would be paying too much for the long desired to see-a genuine whistle. I was satisfied, however, Gipsey dance. I had seen imita- notwithstanding their protestations of it on the Spanish stage, tions, with the accuracy of my but much tempered down to re-dictionary, though at much loss fined tastes, as I found when I to comprehend why they wished came to witness the original.- to deceive or mislead me about My Spanish friend made the pro- it until my Spanish friend afterposal, which was at once accepted, wards explained this trait, with with the proviso that we would other things, in this singular peo-

I expressed a wish to have my set of four took the floor and fortune told. One of the women danced till we had enough of it. offered to bring her mother, who, Well: what shall I say of a Gip- she said, was the best fortunesey dance? It consists of wierd- teller in Spain. She was brought; like gyrations, exceedingly wild and certainly she embodied all and fantastic, but overmuch wan- that is horrible in our conceptions ton and immodest mingled with of a witch. After paying her a songs which, though not unmusi- peseta by way of fee, she proceedcal, gives a strange savagery to ed to read the lines in my hand,

b

I

1 i

c

n tl

81 n

n

h

In

D

V٤

th

and mystic mumblings. I need said, they would have held on to saver of Triana.

what positive institutions do for They observe no rites. unamalgamative tribe on earth. to the Catholic Church. fact books are their abomination. silence for answers. got their fingers on it, my friend ages ago, they are now.

not record her prophecy, which it either by force or fraud .was but the usual twaddle of Nevertheless, in spite of their charlatanry, not remembered now aversions to books, they were even by myself. But I can well uncommonly quick-witted and recall, nor without a shudder, the well-informed. I had formed a ghastly smile, the shriveled fea- low opinion of their morals. I tures, the sinister expression, the was assured, on the contrary, that, malignant leer of the dark sooth- whatever they might be among themselves, they were singularly Walking back to Seville, my free from lustful practices with Spanish friend told me something other nations. They value pure concerning the Gipsies, which Gipsy blood above all price: and interested me greatly, and may the woman, who falls into strange not be unentertaining to you .- loves, is cut off from her tribe by They form no inconsiderable part a secret and terrible concision .of the population of Spain, and Such indulgences, however, on constitute a distinct community- the part of the sex, rarely or never a sort of imperium in imperio- occur. The art of palmistry, with their own laws, customs and whereby they impose so largely manners. Their maxims of gov- upon the Gentiles, is really not ernment are enforced with inex- deemed a system of imposture orable severity, not by the aid of among themselves-but a kind of Courts of their own, which are sacred knowledge rather. Such denied them by the Spaniards, nor horrid crones, as the one they of any regular organism, which brought to decypher my own desrequires formal and public ad- tiny, are reckoned to be endowed ministration; but simply by a pe- with a portion of divinity. Inculiar system of free masonry deed the only religion they have, built upon the pride of race, seemed to connect itself somehow which accomplishes among them with this art. It is their religion. other nations, and render them have no worship. They never acthe most intensely exclusive and cord even an external conformity They have something of an oral deavored to draw them out on literature-nothing written. In this subject, but received only They are They esteem their language itself not addicted to daring violations as a part of their arcana, and fear of the law-but their incorrigible lest the art of writing, if prac- habits of thievery gives the Spanticed by them, might lead the pro- ish authorities much annoyance. fane world into the mysteries of Finally, my friend said, they their Eleusinia. Hence they tried never improve-they never adto persuade me that my dictionary vance. What they were when was untrustworthy: and had they they came into the Peninsular

9

1

9 7

n

r

V

t

e ρf

h

y

 $^{\rm ed}$

n-

e,

W

n.

ey

cty

non ly

re

ns

ble

ince.

ey

ad-

en

lar

ITALICA-CUESTA AND PALOS.

There are several pleasant excursions around Seville-to Italica, for instance, where we are carried back in Roman history to that Scipio, who defeated Hannibal, and who founded this city A. U. C. 547. It was also the birth-place of three Roman Emperors-Trajan, Adrian and The-But of all its Roman odosius. life nothing remains only the ruins of an Amphitheatre, which, had Time, the adorner of ruins, been let alone, would still exist almost equal to the Coliseum at Rome.

"The last, the worst, dull spoiler, who ic corporation of Seville. might have been seen a hundred years ago, like the melancholy mausoleum of an Empire's dust, half-buried in earth and all overspread with herbage and vines:

"Cypress and ivy, weed and wall-flower grown

Matted and mass'd together hillocks hean'd

On what were chambers, arch crush'd, column strown

In fragments, choked up vaults, and frescoes steep'd

In subterranean damps, where the owl peep'd,

Deeming it midnight."

is eminently unclassic and utilitarian; and, after all, a good road is a better thing than an amphitheatre, where wild beasts and wilder men bearded each other to the inhuman shouts of a Roman mob. Rome herself has left us roads which will eternize her better civilization, while her bloody games but tarnish the pictured page of her story.

Not far from Italica, is the village of Cuesta-a village of, perhaps, a dozen mean houses-vet it is the death-place of a life uneclipsed in glory and in crime.-In one of the meanest houses, over the door of a shed-room, ten feet square, more fit for a pig-sty The lazy Spaniard-the unpoet- than for a human habitation, read To- these words; "HERE DIED HERwards the close of the eighteenth NANDO CORTEZ, A VICTIM TO century, a large portion of the DISGRACE AND SORROW, THE materials was removed and em- GLORY OF SPAIN, THE CONQUERployed in constructing a Royal OR OF MEXICO-HE EXPIRED Road to Badajos. The spoliations DEC. 2, 1547." This squalid spot thus effected have much impaired -such a death-chamber-such an the grandeur of the structure as it end of such a career-is likely to stood in its prime, or even as it make older heads than schoolboys, and wiser men than weeping philosophers, dream dreams of human vanity, and take knowledge of "what shadows we are and what shadows we pursue."

I spent a day or too in an excursion to Palos-the little seaport whence Columbus sailed, after eighteen years of hope deferred, on his voyage of discovery, and to which, within eight months, he returned the successful discoverer, whom all the world have since delighted to honor. I need not de-Yet assuredly nothing is here for scribe it. There is, in truth, not tears, and we may well restrain our much to describe; and, besides, vain regrets over the demolition of the graceful pen of Mr. Irving, this stupendous pile. Our age who visited Palos in 1828, has pre

T

P te

iı

ti

II

n I

u tl

tl

V W

is

P

b d tl

V

r

e:

h

a

n

ize on scarcely any other spot such an expedition. rendered immortal by what is deed, remains miserably decayed to show them better treatment.-

ceded me in the task. Nothing and dwindled down to not more can be added in point of style or than three hundred inhabitants. of information to his graphic ac- The white walls of La Rabida rise count, which may be found in the conspicuously on its neighboring 3rd vol. of his Columbus. There hill amid a dark forest of pine was no change in the condition of trees. But of what we expect as things since the period of his visit. in some measure suggestive of the Mr. Ford, it is true, in his "Hand- lofty enterprise of Columbus—of book of Spain," says the Govern- Palos, the sea-port, with its bustment had ordered, in 1846, the ling commerce; not even a wreck is Convent of La Rabida to be fitted left to tell the tale; no trace of a up as an asylum for invalid sol- wharf or landing-place or warediers. I observed, however, no house, or barque or harbor, where preparations of that sort; and it proud navies might ride; absois to be hoped none will be made. lutely nothing! So the mind, un-The Convent should rather re- disturbed by mere perishable main, while time lasts, dedicated memorials of the past, is all the to the same uses and preserved as more sadly awe-impressed by the much as possible in the same state amplitudes of natural scenery-of as when Columbus, wearied with earth and sky and sea, which enhis long journey on foot, begged dure forever. We feel, after all, that at its humble gate for bread and there is a harmony between water for his little boy. Touch- the heroic character of Columbus ing it is, indeed, and more like the and the simple grandeur of the ways of God than any other event scene whence he embarked on his in the divinely-guided life of the heroic voyage. We admire that Discoverer, that, cast off by Prin- Providence which, through so ces and Nobles, his wandering much tribulation, at last sent him feet should have been directed forth from this obscure place, as hither to this by-corner of Spain, another Nazareth, to bless the where he found a welcome sympa- nations and to double the area of thy for his sufferings, and an in- the world. Undoubtedly, if the telligent appreciation of his great finger of God had not indicated argument. There is, too, in be- the way, the shore-line of the holding the earth, the sky, the globe itself hardly contains a port sea about Palos, a certain mourn- which had not been rather selecful awe, which one does not real- ted as the point of departure for

Mr. Irving represents the ingreatest in human thought or in habitants of Palos as totally ighuman action: for there is only norant, and as scarcely knowing earth and sky and sea left here to even the name of America. He connect us in imagination with is doubtless correct. I am not the grandest idea and most peril- sure, however, but we deserve to ous adventure known to the mod- be forgotten and unknown in that ern age. The little village, in- memorable locality, till we learn

ay,

ore

its.

rise

ing

ine

as

the

-of

ust-

k is fa

are-ere bso-

unable

the

the

—of

en-

that reen

bus

the

his

that 80 him

, as

the

a of

the

ated

the port

elec-

for

inig-

ving

He

not re to that earn

at.

They see the face of an American ed. They were formed, indeed, less interest. This is not well.— nor did they do it negligently.— America is a great debtor to Besides an intense love of country mendable resolution and fortitude. were these men made.

this part of the Peninsular with he goes lazily about his easy work, the falling off in the character of or rather there he lies sprawling, who are familiar with the early at all, it is spasmodically and settlement and conquest of Span- wildly wasted in frolic and sport. ish America, that the race of men, nals by the side of what they return to Seville. mightily did and mightily suffer-almost never. We pass by on the and specially endowed for the proother side even to places of far digious work given them to do; Palos, which should be a Mecca and a burning zeal for "the to every American in Spain. Her Faith," they illustrated superbly intrepid seamen were the earliest a proud contempt of pleasure, an companions and coadjutors of untamed spirit of adventure, an Columbus-many of them, it is unconquerable energy and a catrue, forced into his perilous ser- pacity for endurance, which device-but still they were by his fied hunger and thirst, cold and side on the unfathomed waste of heat, want and nakedness, disease waters, and stood to their work, and death. Of such stern stuff all things considered, with com- to will and to do and to suffer, Yet we go on, by a kind of bathos, were the splendid qualities which christening our towns and villa- have cast a halo even around their ges after Rome and Athens and crimes. But we look in vain for Corinth and Utica, while Palos, their like among their descendwhose history is indissolubly link- ants. The contrast in the Andaed to ours, is still unhonored and lusian of this century is painful. He seems incapable of high re-One is struck everywhere in solve or of high endeavor. There the population, compared to what the live long day, listlessly, in the that character was three hundred shade, loquacious, indolent, un-It is known to all warlike. If he rouses up to effort

How is this? Is it that Spain, most of whom were from the in a single century of superhuman Province of Andalusia, sent out energy, spent all her vigor and by Spain for a century after the vitality? Just as among indidiscovery of the New World- viduals sometimes an over-strain the followers of Columbus and brings exhaustion for long after Vasco Nunez, of Cortez and it, if not death itself. Is it that Pizarro-never had an equal, if a Andalusian manhood is not dead rival, in hardy virtues and heroic -but only dormant? Or must we The most stirring rather search for the cause of events of our North American this radical change of character history-even our Plymouth Rock in the laws and policies of Spain? and our Jamestown, it must be With our thoughts employed on owned, read like dull, tedious an- the solution of this problem, we

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

THE MEN IN GREY.

Our conquered heroes homeward came,
Gone from their eyes the glance of flame Marked on their brows the touch of shame And walking wearily.
In tattered coats of dear old grey,
In dusty, weary, worn array,
Their banners—flaunting once and gay, Now drooping drearily.

Ah! different from the longed for day When back would come the dear old grey, With glory crowned, with victory gay As Hope had painted them.
There was no trumpet's stirring sound, No smiles of triumph circling round,
But flags that trailed along the ground, Red with blood that sainted them.

Yet these had fought in Freedom's cause And known nor let, nor doubt, nor pause; They gloried in the glorious scars,
That sealed their souls to liberty.
They rushed in whirlwinds to the fight They swept the foe, before their might They gave their blood and lives for right, Their sacred soil, and victory.

They fainted in the summer's heat They marked the snow with bleeding feet They starved, and fought, in cold and sleet And bore their banners haughtily.
They waited in their dungeons dim, They smiled amidst the rigors grim Of faithless foes, and raised the hymn Of Hope still loftily.

They saw their blazing homesteads fall,
And misery like a funeral pall, Dark lowering, slow envelope all,
That Earth held dear to them.
But, guiding still, through faint and far,
They saw the rays of Freedom's star,
And dared the utmost curse of war
To bring it near to them.

With hope serene, devotion high Unwavering hearts, unflinching eye-Their very women learned to die, As died the heroes teaching them.

Four years their deeds of glory shone, They bore the battle up alone, The World against them, and their own Strong hearts supporting them.

PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERING.

BY FANNY DOWNING.

CHAPTER IV.

"Grand-father, do you consider women inferior animals?"

and looked kindly at the young is God's arriére pensée." speaker. "Well, but do you consider them inferior, Grandpa? are very peculiar sentiments for I have been reading St. Paul's so young a girl!-where did you Epistles, and he certainly does'nt get them?" seem to have a very exalted opinion of my sex!"

ard of excellence, that "- from the beginning, and we have a living reproduction of Aunt

"Called woman because taken out of been made to occupy the lower position. Just think of Adam! Eat as many apples as he wanted, then when the trouble came, in-The speaker, a slight slip of a stead of standing up boldly and girl about seventeen, was perched meeting it, he turned round on up in an arm chair so large, that "the woman, which THOU gavest her trim figure bore the same me!" A double thrust, Grandpa, relative proportion to the amount and you can neither deny, nor deof green morocco by which she fend it! And it has been so ever was surrounded, that a small is- since-we have to bear the blame land does to a huge lake. "My of everything! I wish I was a dear, I do not consider them ani- man!-they take all the cream off mals of any sort!" was the mildly existence, and leave us the bluest admonishing reply as the old gen- kind of skim milk! I suppose it tleman pushed back his spectacles, must be so till the end of the shut up the book, he was reading; world, for as we all know, woman

"Why, Charley, my child, these

"From nature, I think, Grandpa. She intended me for a boy I "St. Paul was so exalted him- know, and I do wish she had carself, and had such a high stand- ried her intention into effect! Was'nt I named Charles Lee Pres-"But Grandpa, it has been so ton before I was born? Am I not great locks just like a boy's!"

curls. tv!

did-"impedimenta," and as for men. the Professor, he is as bad in his ideas of woman, as Mahomet himself!"

"Now! now! Charley; you are unfair; if ever there lived a man, who looked on woman with the devotion of a knight and the veneration of a saint, it is James "Still Grand-Douglas Stuart!" pa, he looks on us as Milton did on Eve-mighty handy things to have about a house, and good to pick vegetables and pare fruit, but as much beneath Adam, as Adam was below the Angel!"

tleman walked slowly in. He was glowing coals.

Betsy Trotwood's disappointment? tall and very spare, the latter Is'nt my very name, given me by fact proceeded more from a lack of poor Mamma, a boy's name? And robustness than from any want of look at my hair!-fix it as I may, health, and his limbs of unusual it will curl close to my head in length, though well shaped individually, were so loosely put to-"It is mighty pretty hair, any- gether as to produce at first sight how, Charley!" and a loving hand an impression of a want of proper was laid tenderly on the bright proportion. His face more than "'Pretty'-there it is! atoned for this, however, not only As if all a woman needs, is to be by the perfect regularity of its pretty! If you had been talking clear cut features, but by an into Frank, you would have told definable sweetness of expression, him of some glorious deed, he and a something which made all must emulate, or given him some who looked on him feel that the difficult study to conquer, but be- gentle purity which it displayed, cause I am a girl; you pat me on was the true reflex of the man's the head, and tell me I am pret- nature. For the rest, his clothes awkwardly put on, and totally in-Grandma's quite as bad; she nocent of even an approximation thinks women were made just to to fashion, his long hands white keep house, nurse sick people, and delicate as a woman's and take care of negroes, and knit above all a dreamy, preccupied stockings. Frank looks on them look in his gentle eyes, plainly as pretty china toys, but con- proved that he was one more given siders them as the old Romans to the study of books than of

He did not speak, but sinking down into a chair by the large fire of hickory logs, held his hands out over the inviting blaze unconscious of any presence in the room but his own.

"I say, James, defend yourself and your sex against the assault of this saucy girl-she is too much for me!" said the Colonel cheerily. "Eh? Ah!-I beg your pardon, but I had just found the solution to a problem, which had bothered me somewhat, and it absorbed me."

"I wish you would solve mine," "Here he is to answer your said Charley, walking to the side sauciness as it deserves," said of the fire opposite his seat, and Colonel Preston, as the library holding out a remarkably small door was softly opened and a gen- and pretty foot over the bed of girl with a pleasant smile.

portance in your eyes, as it con-dear young lady, I do solemnly the tone of a petted child.

whom I consider the Master-piece most"of the Master! Tell me, what your problem is, and I may be fessor?" able to help you clear it."

woman is so hampered and bound the bright face opposite to him, and subject to the will of a court his very temples. in which accuser, witness, judge, and the same person! I think never tried-I-I might!" she has the husks of life, and you made up of such very little things! reply. kees talk about. I do not want to which poured from it." unsex my sex, nor in any way to usurp the privileges of yours; but wet!" said the Colonel, laying his I do think, Professor, that you hand on the Professor's shoulder," men might abate a little of your have you been out in the storm?" lordly assumption-might give woman!' You are arrogant, and he is ill, and I went to see him!" conceited, and opinionated, and unkind, and you cannot deny it!" broke in Charley. and Miss Charley's little foot was an emphatic tap.

said the Professor aghast at the made my visit, and the family is a

"What is it, Miss Charley?" turn the girl's attack had taken, he said, looking up to the young and seeming to feel that he was individually responsible for the "Oh! a subject of small im- accumulated sins of his sex, "My cerns woman!" was the reply in assure you, that such a thought even as you ascribe to me, has "You are mistaken, Miss Char- never entered my mind! I revere . ley; you do not understand the woman! I think your sex approxiextent of my regard for those, mates to the angels!-could al-

"Could you love one of us, Pro-

The poor Professor raised his "Well, Professor, I feel that eyes in absolute consternation to down as it were-condemned to a which was certainly pretty enough state of inactive inferiority-gov- to retain the gaze of any who looked erned by laws she did not make, at it, while the blood mounted to

"Upon my life, Miss Charley" jury and executioner are all one he faltered, "I do not know-I "Do not fatigue yourself with the all, the ripe corn-woman's life is immense exertion!" was the cool "You had better go and I do not wish her to vote, or claim change your coat; it must be wet any of the horrid rights, the Yan- to judge from the streams of vapor

"It is, James—so it is! wringing

"Yes sir; Stephen told me that yourselves a few less I-am-Sir- the family, which moved last oracle-airs-and might think a week to the house on the Broad little more highly of our best per- fields' road was in great distress, formances than lies in the faint and the man, whom I knew in praise you give, 'very good, for a Williamsburgh, wished to see me,

"Without your cloak, of course!"

"No, Miss Charley, you are brought down on the hearth with mistaken; I did put on that tried old friend of mine, and in it bade "I assure you, Miss Charley," defiance to rain and wind." I case for the kind offices of you I'll coax Mammy to make you a ladies.—and was returning, when cup of her especial coffee, and I'll ject which I at first thought, was you can go to work on "Hector" an animal. Upon coming nearer, until I send you a glass of hot girl rather, scarcely so old as straight to sleep. I can perform looking creature I ever beheld.

clothes were all plastered with she ran off. mud and drenched with rain, and cold and physical prostration that notions she has expressed? learning that she was on her way of an idol, I have never known it. to Broad-fields, but did not know ("Four additional miles in such a age-she talks like an old woman!" storm as this" sotto voce, from would otherwise have had.

the rain."

you ought to have a keeper!" said has vouchsafed to mortals." the girl in a voice, she tried to make sharp.

able."

"Do please," said the girl "and of it and me!

I saw coming along the road from fix your supper myself, and send the direction of the river, an ob- it up to you, and after you eat it, I found that it was a woman, a punch, after which, you are to go yourself, and the most pitiable these little services-being little, they are suited to a woman!" and She was thinly clad and her sweeping the sauciest courtesy,

"James," said the old gentleshe was suffering so much from man "Where did that girl get the I feared she would fall in the road. ever there was a petted child on I spoke to her, and succeeded in this earth, or one made so much

What does she mean about inits exact location. So I begged feriority and arrogance and all her to let me take her there" that?-it is not natural at her

"She is an uncommon girl in all Charley") and as the poor child respects, and far beyond her years. was too much exhausted to re- She has been brought up with fuse, I wrapped her up in my old persons much older than herself, cloak, and managed to get her to and she thinks deeply, that's all, the door of Broad-fields, with, I Colonel. It is all natural enough; trust, less discomfort than she she has just learned to fly, and she feels that the world itself is When we got to the door, she scarcely wide enough for the compleaded so earnestly that I should pass of her wings. Do not try to leave, that I did so; and, Miss check her; let a few years roll Charley, I confess it, I forgot my over her head and she will get her cloak, and did not think of it true poise and find that in the until unpleasantly reminded by sphere, she now considers so circumscribed, lie the highest rights "Just like you, Professor! - and greatest privileges that God

"I trust so, James, if it will make the child happier—she is the "I know it, Miss Charley" was very apple of my eyes, and the the gentle reply, "Now I'll take joy of my life. I think her peryour advice and change my coat, fect, and the worst of it is that I for I begin to feel very uncomfort- cannot conceal my opinion, and the little rogue takes advantage her to think of marrying-she ed, with you and Grandma, and was a year younger when we were aunt Eliza and Frank to love me, married-and has set her heart on and yet I am dissatisfied and dis-Charley and match in the old Virginia style. cies, and unable to bear any con-I am not much in favor of first tradiction. I have been thinking cousins marrying, but if Charley of that poor young girl the Proloves the boy, I am willing. I'll fessor met-thinking of her misnot oppose her marriage with any erable condition, and contrasting one except a Bostonian, and then it with mine, and, Grandpa, it has by George, I'd stop the ceremony, done me good! I will try to be a if I had to shoot the rascal at the a better girl than I have been!" altar!"

She does not love our Boston cheek was pressed to his. brethren any more than you do. very impersonation of fun and jewelry." mischief. Ready to be married! How old I must have grown!"

you here, you may look out for a I will be so happy!" storm of indignation."

After he had left the room, first time you use it!" Colonel Preston sat in his arm "No, indeed! I am going to ed in silent thought, until he was Jack is to put up a target, and joined by Charley, who kneeling Frank is to give me lessons as her bright head on his knee, and termined to make the most of shared his silence for a while.

"Grandpa," she said at last, "I girl, and do not deserve one half sons in another art!" the blessings God has given me!heart can ask for-not one wish light reply. "But I must go and Wife begins to say it is time for ungratified, or one desire ungrant-Frank making a contented, full of whims and fanand a pair of soft arms were clasp-"No fear of that contingency! ed round his neck, and a warm

"Don't, child-don't!" said the But, Colonel, can you be in earnest old gentleman, hastily, with a on the subject of Miss Charley's huskiness in his voice, "if you get marriage? Why it seems only a any better, you will die! You are few weeks ago, since I left William plenty good enough for me now. and Mary to become tutor to her There, there-don't think of such and Frank, when she was a little things, and I'll send to Richmond thing in her short dresses, and the to-morrow and order you a set of

"Thank you, Grandpa-I do not wish any more jewelry: Grand-"You do not shew it, James," ma's and Mamma's is more than said the old gentleman heartily, enough for me. But if you will "but you had better go to your get me a little love of a pistol I room. If that little tyrant finds saw on main street, oh! Grandpa,

"And shoot yourself with it the chair by the glowing fire, absorb- learn to be a famous shot. Uncle down on the rug beside him, laid soon as he comes, and I am dethem!"

"Humph, child! I am inclined am a bad, wayward, ungrateful to think Frank will give you les-

"Well, I am willing, provided Here I am with every thing that he and it are agreeable," was the Why do you not go up to his room fering Professor, and in due time and take tea with him?—it will be the two steaming punches sent up so cosy. Grandma, does not feel by the hands of uncle Jack, Colowell enough to come down stairs nel Preston's body servant, who this evening, and she and mammy had attended his master from his are in their state of highest en- boyhood through his wild college joyment, nursing and being nurs- days, and the scarcely less wild ed. I sometimes think that the ones when he was a member of greatest proof of affection I can the House of Delegates, and who positively give Grandma, would now ruled over him with a tyranbe to have a spell of illness that ny which was ludicrous. she might have the pleasure of nursing me, and I do not know after a visit to her Grand-mother's but it is undutiful in me not to room, and a lively chat with her, give her the opportunity!"

"Very well, Miss; think as you her pretty chamber. please, but be convinced that the kissed her rosy cheek.

"You do not know, my child ble fingers. how completely my life is wrapped doings.

than that!"

punch! over the acid!" The directions of in unrestricted freedom. the Colonel were obeyed to the The snowy night gown was now letter; a delicious supper was slipped over the head, and its see to the poor professor's supper. served up in the room of the suf-

Then the sprightly tea-maker said good night and went off to Dismissing Mandy her foster highest proof you can give me is sister and maid, Miss Preston perto stay well, Charley, my darling!" formed the task of disrobing for said the old gentleman as he the night, without other assistance than that of her own nim-

First the little lace collar and up in yours. You know, darling, ribbon were removed from the that ever since I was born, I have neck, and the bright merino dress had an unmitigated hatred of laid aside; next the snowy skirts Bostonians, and the feeling deep- were lifted over the head, then a ens with my age, and their evil spring touched in front of the rounded waist, when with a clicking But Charley child, to keep you and metallic sound, down came well and make you happy, I'd the wide expanse of crinoline, open my heart to the entire Yan- while Miss Charley stepped out of kee nation! I can't say any more its steel circle, considerably collapsed, but all the prettier. Now run along; send up some somewhat similar mechanical opeof old Chloe's best waffles and ration was repeated and numerous biscuits, and a piece of broiled veni- springs and curls were sent in a zon-don't forget the jelly. And lively motion, and then with a child, send up two glasses of stretch upward of the plump white Remember the family arms, and a long drawn sigh of recipe, and make the punch like relief, off came the little French woman's temper ought to be- "railroad" corsets, and the dimwith the sweet perponderating pled shoulders of the wearer rose mirror was visited, and the sweet will. charming little moues made at the curls until they shone like satin.

where teeth white as cocoa-nut a state of equal rights. meat, were rubbed until they measurer. lord of the lady will be her mas- dreams. ter as well, while if the second has the preëminence, a similar delicate frills daintily adjusted to fate is in store for herself, and the throat and wrists. Next the her only master will be her own

In the present instance, both of bright face it reflected, and then the soft pink toes were of such seizing the brush, the girl, pro- sameness of length, that the inferceeded to apply it to her glossy ence was sufficiently clear that destiny decreed the married life Thence to the wash-stand, of Miss Charley Preston should be

That young lady sat still gleamed still whiter, and the rosy and amused herself by doing a face dipped in the gilded basin of little prospecting in the way of pure, cold water until it glowed gazing down into the coals glowwith renewed crimson. And then ing before her, and then taking drawing a low seat close to the her Bible from its stand, she read fire, the young girl laid one pretty the lessons appointed for the evefoot lightly on her knee and be- ning, then knelt and said her simgan to unlace the tiny boot which ple prayers. A puff of fragrant encased it; in a few moments breath from a pair of rosy lips, and both little feet were bare in their out went the candle, leaving the childish beauty, and pressed down room lighted only by the rich on the hot bricks of the hearth, fire light. Then unbolting the while a careful measurement was door that Mandy, who slept in made as to the relative lengths of her young mistress's room, might the big toe and the one next to it, gain access, when it should please for in this important difference her to leave the delights of the depends the momentous question kitchen, the young girl turned as to which of two shall rule in back the soft blankets, and snowy the future married life of the sheets of her bed, made the im-It having been de- press of her rounded figure in its creed by mysterious and immuta- downy depth, laid her innocent ble signs, that should the great head upon the tastefully trimmed toe be the longer, the forthcoming pillow, and went to her happy

(TOBE CONTINUED.)

MISCELLANEA.

CURIOUS MISTAKE IN FABULOUS GEOGRA-

In answer to the question: where was situated the Island on which Robinson Crusoe spent so many years? nine out of ten of the readers-and all readers are admirers-of Defoe's inimitable story, will reply: off the coast of Chili, on the western side of the South American Continent. A recent writer in a British Magazine (and the article has appeared also in the Richmond Eclectic) giving an account of a visit to the Island of Juan Fernandez, represents himself, when first setting his foot on its soil, as unconscious- Anecdote of Governor ore of south ly looking around on all sides for the remains of Robinson's cave. ber which,) an author of some renowned University. handiwork! play!

Now, it happens that, Crusoe other side of the Continent, and many degrees north of Juan Fernandez. He places it in the very mouth of the Orinoco river.

It has been conjectured that Defoe derived the hints of his story from the adventures of Alexander Selkirk, who, it is said, did live, in solitude, for seven years, on Juan Fernandez, but the fact that Robinson Crusoe's adventures are located at so great a distance from his, is perhaps a full counter-balance to the very slight reasons on which the conjecture is founded.

CAROLINA.

THE anecdote given below I He saw many things to remind find going "the round of the paof Defoe's wonderful story! The pers," the scene laid in England, accuracy of his descriptions is (I am glad it is not New England) really marvellous! Several years and the dramatis personæ repre-John Rosse Browne, or sented as Oxford Tutor, and a Browne Rosse (I do not remem- gentleman whilom student in that reputation as well as pretension, the South, have so long been acvisited this same Juan Fernandez. customed to be plundered of our He, too, almost saw the ruins of goods and our rights of every the cave, and of the folds in which sort, with and without pretence Robinson penned his goats; with of law, that it may seem late in other traces of his habitation and the day to offer either objection Alas! what tricks or complaint; still I do not feel the fancy-that of tourists writing willing that this fine specimen of for the papers, especially-will genuine ready wit should be filched from us.

The parties were the Rev. Dr. is very precise in the location of White, of Lexington, Va., and his Island. He gives the exact the Hon, J. L. Orr, now Governor latitude and longitude; and, accord- of South Carolina. I have mying to his account, to be found in self heard the incident narrated more than one place in his narra- by Dr. W. with that genial tive, it was situated quite on the heartiness of manner which all t

S f

a t

ī

.

who have enjoyed the pleasure of that time, and I recognized you his acquaintance will readily re- as soon as I saw you walk across call, and his numerous friends at the room." (The good Dr. is a distance will rejoice to learn, is lame and limps considerably in not, in any degree, abated by ad- his walking.) "It seems then, vanced years, nor even by the Col. Orr," replied Dr. White, gentlemen had met at a hotel in ing did; I cannot feel therefore flatthe mountains of Virginia during tered by your recognizing me after the summer of one of the early so many years." Col. Orr instantminutes, Col. O. accosted Dr. W. know it is the highest compliment with the inquiry: "Were you not we can pay to one of your profes-Chaplain to the University of sion to say that he is better known Virginia in 18-;" and, on the by his walk than by his conversa-Dr's. replying in the affirmative, tion." added: "I was a student there at infirmities of protracted ill-health. "that my lameness made a deeper Dr. White, Col. Orr, and other impression on you than my preachyears of the war. After some ly rejoined: "But, Doctor, you

AUNT ABBY, THE IRREPRESSIBLE.

A SKETCH FROM LIFE.

the passage of a bill appropriating to write that down too." fifteen hundred dollars to the I lav—said.

IT was Valentine's Day, and you had writ something about having spent a large part of the President Davis, and Giniral Lee, morning in the gallery of both for Giniral Hill's book, and I've houses of the Legislature "assist- come over here to give you my ing," as the French would say, at 'sperience of the war, and git you

She was dressed in deep mourn-Ladies Memorial Association, I ing, with a black silk handkerthrew myself on a sofa after my chief tied over her cap and under return from the State House, her chin, so as to conceal every fatigued with the exertion of particle of white, which might mounting two pair of stairs, and otherwise have softened the harsh dropped into a half doze, from outlines of her face; over this was which I was roused by the sudden stuck a black shaker bonnet opening of the door and the en- which tipped so far forward as altrance, unannounced, of a tall, most to rest on her nose; and as Meg Merrilies looking woman, I caught the expression of her who walking straight up to where shrewd black eyes peering at me in a weird and scrutinizing man-"I staid last night with Miss ner, I instinctively felt that her Bobbett, and she told me as how 'sperience would be worth listen-ver

cou

reg

the

wh

one gel

no

bee

pra

is

Co

he

W٤

ev

661

or

P

G

ty

m

of

fa st ir

h

b

g

y

c t

t

to the readers of THE LAND WE federate cause. LOVE.

House" and her untiring efforts to obtain furloughs for sick soldiers, ever since the first year of the war, and recognized in her, one of those persons who are best described as being "a character;" so inviting her to take a seat, I pressed her to "give me her 'sperience" then and there. But I soon found she was like a person conscious of sitting for her portrait, and was doing her very worst, from a laudable desire to do her very best. So, taking a hint from my artist friend, Mr. Brown, I set down her age and one or two items, and then throwing my pen one side said to her-

"I cant possibly do it now Aunt Abby, and there is not time to get it done before the next number of 'General Hill's book' comes out. I heard that you had broken your arm not long ago, tell me about that now, and before next court you'll be in town again and will have it all straight for me."

length and breadth, and I then by in personal contact with the first ing to, and perhaps worth relating Southern women, into the Con-

Being a woman of strong char-I had heard of "Aunt Abby acter, and one who could use her tongue effectively, she early in life acquired an authoritative air and manner, which very soon placed her in the category of "people who have a way," and enabled her to prove that she also had a will; to which most persons with whom she came in contact submitted. Never was the proverb "where there is a will there is always a way" more clearly demonstrated than in her case. The converse of this maxim is generally equally true, for wherever a person is found with "a way" to which others submit to in them, but would resent in another, it is pretty good proof that, no matter what may be the mental and moral force of such individuals, their strength of will is undoubted.

"Aunt Abby," the name by which she has gradually come to be known, was never known to yield what she conceived to be a right, without a struggle, and has consequently been involved during the greater part of her life in She narrated her accident in its lawsuits, which have brought her well turned questions drew her on lawyers of the State. This has until, excited by the relation of doubtless confirmed her natural the past, she forgot she was giv- fearlessness of speech; for among ing me her "sperience," and pour- the country people of North Caroed out the whole story of her life lina, more especially that much since the commencement of the sneered at portion of them who She was sixty-five years cannot read and write, who are old when it began, and though so mourned over by Northern Radunable to read or write, mastered icals, but who generally manage the rights of the question in her notwithstanding to make good citown opinion, and threw herself, izens, with clear common sense heart and soul, like most of the views of politics, the leading lawyer practising in the courts of the time on none 'er your under county in which they reside, is strappers-I went straight to regarded as the greatest man in President Davis or Gineral Lee, the State, and the Governor and and I got it." whole executive sink into a secwanted to."

strong mind. "I haint bin a law- and bury you with your kin." wanted anything I never wasted three miles from the depot, and

This was her reply to my quesondary position beside him; it is tion as to what put it first into generally believed that he does her head to go to see President not hold the highest offices, simply Davis. She had eight nephews because he would not give up his in the Confederate army, all but practice for them, and when he one, Edward Sutton of Georgia, is elected Governor, or sent to in North Carolina regiments .-Congress they "always knowed "Ah! I can tell you what narry a he could 'er bin long ago if he man in my family would I a let stay at home in peace when he Nothing but the best would was able to shoulder a musket .ever satisfy Aunt Abby, and she I said to them, boys says I, all who spoke her mind freely to 'er you go a'long to the field whar "lawyer Badger, lawyer Miller, you belongs, and if eny on you or Squire Haywood," had no gits sick or is wounded, you may bashfulness in the presence of depend on yer old aunt Abby to President Davis, General Lee, or nuss and 'tend to you. For so Governor Vance. To the same help me God if one on you gits cause she probably owes her abili- down, and I cant git to you no ty to see more clearly into the other way, I'll foot it to your merits of a case than most women bed-sides; and if arry a one on of her class, and has acquired a you dies, or is killed, I promise, facility in the use of her naturally before the Lord to bring you home in' of it nigh upon thirty years, Faithfully did she keep this honey, without findin' out that a promise, five of the eight sleep in bad speaker'll spile a good case, soldiers graves, and she never and that's the reason when I's failed in it to one of them. The got enything to say I says it right first year of the war had not out 'at head quarters. When closed before she was called on to you see a lawyer a carryin of a bring home the body of one of case first to the county court and them who had died in the hospital then to the superior court, and at Petersburg. She went on to then a flinging of it into the su- nurse him as soon as she heard he preme court, you may be pretty was sick, and after remaining shure he is ginerally a trying to with him some time left him, as stave off a judgment and git time. she supposed, convalescent, and Now that's jest the way in the returned to her home in Franklin army, if you goes to the Captain county; she had not been there he sends you to the Major, and if long before a letter came telling you goes to the Major he sends her if she wished to see him alive you to the Curnel, so when I she must hasten back; she lived

per

fur

bec

wo

Lo

I,

pa ba

tal

sa

fet

lau

th

me

up

nu

bu

el,

bu

th an gv

be

th

he

y

pa

w

01

2€

g

T

d

it

I

had only time to reach it before died if I had 'er staid thar to papers signed to do it." 'tend to him; and I said I never and nuss him myself; for I did'nt mond to see President Davis. have no 'pinion of them thar army Sudgins. got well.

boys home and nuss 'em when thar want no certainty on it .-'em so." you could get to 'em."

"Well, if they haint got sense the next train passed by, running enough to know that a ole 'omau a great part of the way. This knows a sight more about nussing she did, and got to Petersburg to of a man that's down with the find her nephew speechless and measles or the plurissy than these insensible. "But by a rubbing here young Doctors does whose and doctoring of him, I fotch him a thinking a sight more about round to know me afore he died, siling of them new uniforms, and and then I brung him home to a drinking liquor than they is Franklin to his mother, I sent a about curing of them that is in nigger on ahead from the depot to the horse-pital, they'd better give tell her I was a coming with up their places to them as has, Dunc's body, but he never went, and go into the ranks; and you and the poor thing never know'd all hear me say it now, that the he was dead 'til I drove up in a next one of my boys that gits cart with him. But I could'nt down, I'm gwine ter bring him rest 'er nights arter we had buried home if I has to go inter Presihim for thinking he would'nt 'er dent Davis' bed-chamber to git the

It was not long before her resowould leave another one on 'em lution was put to the test, another in a hospital agin, but jest fetch nephew sickened, and Aunt Abby, the next one that tuck sick home true to her word set off for Rich-

"You see, honey," said she, Some of the "I did'nt know then izactly whar neighbors 'lowed Jeff. Davis want to strike for him; so I went fust a gwine ter let me fetch soldiers to A-gustis (Custis) Lee's office, off just when I tuck a notion ter; Giniral Lee's son you know that and said thar was an order out was made a Giniral hisself arter that all soldiers in the horse- that, but who was a clerking then pitals was to stay thar till they along er Mister Davis; and he told me I could'nt see the Presi-"Till they dies you'd better dent just then, 'cause he was busy, say, says I; and if they aint a but if I would set down awhile gwine to let us women bring the mabe I might git to see him, but they's sick, then its a burning Says I to myself, young man if shame they don't take better kere you thinks to git rid o' me by on 'em in the horse-pitals; and that dodge, you don't know Abby I've a great mind to go and tell House; but I sot down and waited awhile, till I seed the door of the "You'd better," says they, President's room open and two "much Jeff. Davis and Gin'ral gentlemen come out on it, and Lee's gwine to heed what a ole then, afore they had time to shut 'oman like you can say, even if it, I slips right in, and told him what I wanted. He talked mighty ıy,

186

an ng he ese

ose

out nd

is in ive

as.

ou he

its

im

si-

the 80-ner by,

ch-

he,

nar

ust ce,

hat ter

nen he esi-

sy,

nile

but

ı if

by oby

ted

the

wo

and hut

nim

hty

perlite, but said he could'nt give furloughs to the men as was sick, I have hearn you said about me because if he did, they never will you own it, if its true? would git well and come back. Lord bless your soul President says place to deny it in another, says I, if that's all, you jest sign the I, and I aint a gwine to begin paper and trust me to git 'em now." back-for if ar'er a man that I up sooner if he had a woman to was a gwine to." nuss him than he would if he only had a man: He 'lowed he might, Lee, he talked the same way, and but said it wa'rnt the gitting on I jest said to him: "Gin'ral, is but the gitting on 'em back when he's sick?" Says he, "I can't they was well, and then I jest up say as he is, Madame, but if I and told him that if he war'nt a was to send every soldier home they was better 'tended to in the all." 'Their lives is in assure you."

I've seed o' your horspitals aint tother side the river." your level worst."

that's been abusing of me so.

Says I, mabe I'm that.

Well, says he, if I tell you what

"I never said a word in one

Then he up and told me what I takes off won't come back when I had said when Dunc died, and I say the word for him to do it, I'll said them's my very words; and fetch him back myself. He sorter moreover, them's my sentiments; laughed when I said this, and and he jest tuck up his pen and then I axed him if he had the signed the papers right off, and measels did'nt he think he'd git give me transportation to whar I

The furst time I seed Gin'ral 'em well he was thinking about, that thar boy eny use to you now gwine to let the boys go home to who is sick, as I should like to do, be nussed, then he oughter to see I should soon have no army at

"Gin'ral," says I, "you jest your hands says I, and you haint let me have Marcellus, and if he, got no right to turn 'em over to a or arre man that I carries home, passel o' medikill students, jist wants to set in the chimbly corner out o' school, who half the time and hide behind me arter I say when they is 'tending to them, is he is well enough to be of use to only a trying of 'speriments upon you, I'll jest shoulder his muskit 'em to see how the truck they and take his place myself, and I'll gives 'em is a gwine to work." - warrant you I'll be of more sar-Then he got serus, and sorter vice in the ranks than any sick, drawd himself up and said, "I'm sneaking coward would be. But doing of my very best, Madam, I you need nt be afeard o' that, for I can tell you if he was sick he "Well, if you's a doing of your would'nt dare to own it, for I'd best I should like to see some on make him more afeard of his old it, says I, for I be switched if all aunt Abby than of all the yankees

Her nephew, Edward Sutton, Then he laughed right out, and was killed at the battle of Fredersays you must be that old woman icksburg. He was separated from his company, who could not find his body, and supposed he might have been taken prisoner; but un- him from Zeb Vance, the Governfor Ned."

forget it."

didn't you?" said I to her.

loughs for the boys as was sick his office. from both on 'em.

certainty would not satisfy Aunt or of North Car'lina, and my or-Abby, and she set out to search ders was to put it in nobody's the battle-field herself; for twelve hands but Gin'ral Lee's, and it days she wandered over it un- aint a bit o' use for you to try to mindful of its horrors, "looking keep me from doing on it, for I aint no more afraid o' your bag-"I was determined I'd never nets and muskits than I is of so give over till I had looked in the many broom straws and whip face of every man thar," she said. poles; so I went right straight in "Gin'ral Lee he gin me a guard and give him the letter and got to go 'long o' me, for he was al'ers the furlough signed to take Maras good to me as he could be, and cellus home. You jest write to I went till I found him. I know'd Zeb Vance, honey, and ax him if him when I got in ten steps of I aint carried more'n one letter him; and says I to the men as from him to Gin'ral Lee. And as was with me, 'yonder's Ned.'- for President Davis, Lord bless He was a leaning agin a fence, you, I got so I didn't mind a going like as if he was a looking over it, to him a grain. Augustis Lee, he and his hand was raised bout like used to be mighty good to me, he was a holding of his muskit with and would say, "Set down, Aunt the butteend on it a resting on Abby, and don't go a bothering the ground when he was shot; his of Mister Davis yit awhile, and face was sorter turned over his I'd stay in his room tell I thought shoulder, and it seemed to me he he was 'bout through, or oughter was a looking back, and a beckon- be, with them as was with him, ing on me to come on and keep my and then I'd up and go in. Wonst promise of burying him with his Augustis, he said to me, 'Mr. Dakin, and he had a sorter peaceful vis is mighty busy to-day, Gin'ral look as if he knowed I would'nt Lee's here to see him and he aint come down yit to his office.'-"You went to see General Lee 'Lord,' says I, 'if he and your par and Mr. Davis more than once, gets together they haint no telling when they will git through "Lord bless you honey, yes, ther chat, so I'll jest set outside many's the time I've got fur- and ketch him afore he goes inter Augustis, he 'lowed Wonst I I'd better set thar by the fire, but went into Gin'ral Lee's tent arter I went out and sot on the steps; he had gone to bed, and shuck presently they come along togethhim by the shoulder as he lay er, Mr. Davis was a walking fust, asleep 'afore the fire, and told he holds his head sorter high him to git up and read a letter I when he walks, and he was a talkhad fotch him from Governor ing to Gin'ral Lee so he never Vance; the men outside, you see, seed me, but passed on, I sot still, tried to keep me from going in, and Gin'ral Lee he seed me, and but, says I, I's got a letter for sorter smiled and nodded to me.

ay,

rn-.

or-v's

lit

to

rI

ag-

so

hip

t in got lar-

to m if tter

d as less

oing

, he

me,

unt

ring

and ight

hter

im,

onst

Da-

ral

aint

2.7_

par

tel-

ugh

side

nter

wed

but eps;

eth-

fust,

high

talk-

ever still,

and

me,

but never said nothing; and I up shet the door thar I was inside went outon it. 'High!' says he, 'and whar and he shuck hands with me, and liar." I says, ves, but President Davis money?"," seven women I'm a taking on to shucks in summer time, 'thout'en see their husbands, because you it was Mister Randolp, and he wont let their husbands go to see would'nt stay 'long o' him 'cause them."

ed, and Mr. Davis he tuck up his you is content to be." pen and writ something for me to could not possibly attend to the did you?" papers that day." "But Mister I'd get them signed at wonst."

ing."

monstrous busy, so I says—the President no more to-day, so 'tend to." Mister Davis when I comes back to-morrow, me too are you?" leave 'em now."

The Secretary of War assured and followed him so close that her they would be attended to, when Mr. Davis turned round to and she left him, saying as she

"Well, if they's done when I did you come from, and how did come back to-morrow Mister Secyou git in?' Then Gin'ral Lee retary, then I'll say, for the fust says, 'I seed her as we passed;' time in her life Abby House is a

On her return next day she holds his head too high to see old found the papers as she had prefriends when they's under his feet; dicted she would; coolly taking he laughed, and so did the Gin'ral, them up she said, "Whose told a and then he says-'Well, Aunt lie now Mr. Secretary, you or Abby, I aint likely to forgit you, me?" and plumping herself down no matter who else I forgits. in a chair said, "Here I sets now What's it now? Furloughs or till them papers is fixed. President Davis never did have a Sec-"Both on 'em says I, I've got retary of War that was worth he want a going to be no man's "Then they both on 'em laugh- under strapper like the rest o'

When I told the President about carry to the Secretary of War. I it he laughed and says, "So you tuck it to him, and he said he gin it to the Secretary of War

"Yes says I, I did, and I can tell Secretary, says I, I wants 'em you what, President Davis, you right off, and when President never will have a Secertery of Davis sent me to you he thought War or of anything else that's worth a straw as long as you keep "It's impossible, Madame, says er interfering with 'em so, you's he, but you shall have them by too proud to let ar'er other man eleven o'clock to-morrow morn- have a finger in your pie; if you'd be satisfied with being President I know'd Mister Davis was and not want to be all the Secerteries too, you'd find you had "Well, I aint gwine to bother more'n enuff for one man to I'll lay these here papers on your laughed fit to kill hisself, and table, and its my opinion that says, 'So you're gwine to scold Well now they'll be a lying here just like I 'spose you jest tend to gitting of furloughs and transportation, and leave me to manage my Secer- don't 'spose my say 's gwine to teries, and I'll promise to do the turn you a hare from your purbest I kin by them and you."

SI tl si

Lord knows you are a proud man, I'm a talking to." as you have a right to be, and I pose, but I alers speaks what's "It's a bargain," says I, "for the in my mind I don't kere whom

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

REVOLUTIONARY ANECDOTE.

PULASKY COUNTY, KY.,

December 9, 1833. but, it was believed, by the assist- a means for his execution. ance of other tories, the jail door letters to the Cherokee Indians to passed, by a unanimous vote. raise and bring them on to murder the frontier inhabitants .-Gen. Campbell, in company with a James Fullon and a man by the To Gen. FRANK PRESTON.

name of Farris, discovered Hopton crossing the road before them, DEAR SIR:-In a late commu- pursued and caught him in the nication received from the Hon. ford of the Middle Fork, about a J. M. Fulton, there was presented mile above Capt. Thompson's .a request from you to me to give They took him out to the bank, you an account of what I knew searched him and found the paconcerning the character of Hop- pers above alluded to. Hopton ton, who was hanged by General was on a horse which he had sto-Campbell during the Revolution- len, perhaps, not two hours beary War. Hopton was of infa- fore they caught him, and had a mous character, and considered a new halter tied on behind him, dangerous tory, and as such was which, it was believed, he intendarrested by a legal precept and ed for another horse before he left committed to prison in Abingdon; the neighborhood: this served as

The whole affair, with all its was prized off its hinges and car- circumstances and the papers, ried half a mile away from the were laid before the Legislature of jail. Hopton escaped to the Brit- Virginia, and an act of indemnity ish and obtained a commission and for the parties concerned was

> Yours respectfully, S. NEWELL.

to ır-

178 m

p-

n, ne

k.

a-

n

0-

e-

a 1ft

IS

of

WAR POETRY OF THE SOUTH.

heart of a people.

which waved the sword and led crease. men on to a charge, which was ed assertion.

above avocations in a happy union, tiring industry, he sends out fresh conquer Fortune. impressions from the press of his true Southern heart.

THE truth of the trite saying, tinetured with the chivalric darthat a race of warriors is always ing of the beautiful State, which succeeded by a growth of writers he represents. The interests, the has been conclusively proved in honor, and the glory of the South, the two years, which have elapsed have been his watch-words, and since the surrender of the dearest nobly has he done duty for them, hopes and the noblest cause, maintaining them through good which were ever hugged to the and through evil report, with a strength and tenacity of purpose, More than one noble hand, which seemed ever on the in-

In the present position of this seemingly certain death, merci- ardent lover of his country and fully preserved to its country, now earnest laborer in her behalf, in the retirement of library, or there is something not only peoffice, employs the pen in quieter culiarly touching, but eminently work, but such as may yet prove worthy of imitation. Ruined by the truth of Richelieu's celebrat- the war, his beautiful home desolated, his books, valuable, not While many, who are precluded only for great intrinsic worth, but from original literary composition, also, from a thousand hallowed gather up the works of others accociations, employed as material with zealous care, and seek to for a bon-fire, to light up Shergive them, and the themes of man's march to Columbia, and which they treat, permanence and the fruits of a long life of honorperpetuity. The eminent author, able labor utterly destroyed, he whose name appears at the head does not sit hovering over the of this article, combines, both the ruins of the past, but buckling on his armor, throws himself into for while, with constant and un- the teeming present, resolved to

Possessed by a spirit of ever acinexhaustible fancy, he has still tive industry, the Nestor of found time to collect the scattered Southern Litterateurs passes his works of others, and combine life in an unending round of duthem in a book, whose name ties and labors, not only for himought to be a passport to every self, but for others, who may need Labor for his services, and one reads of his the land he loves so well is no new passing five days and nights in act on the part of Dr. Simms! almost consecutive exertion, and From his earliest youth, he has yet on the sixth, such is his wonespoused her cause with an im- derful vitality and flow of energy, passioned devotion, which was cheerfully attending a festival in

f

t

h

was so justly entitled.

indulgence, or waste life, time and tion of poems. reputation while supinely "waiting for something to do!"

One can scarcely estimate the annoyances, nor the vast amount of labor attendant upon the prosecution of Dr. Simms' work, which may well be classed as the pursuit of usefulness under difficulties.

Undertaken at a time when the postal intercourse of the South was confined almost entirely to the great cities along the regular mail route, its author was compelled to rely on such stray scraps of poetry, as he might collect from the fugitive literature of the war, and the productions of those whom he could reach by letter.

Vast quantities of literary material, however, were contributed, the poems amounting to over ten thousand; but it was, unfortunately, an affair in which quantity largely preponderated over quali-

Through all this chaotic mass, Dr. Simms delved most diligently, until he had restored it to order, and extracted from it all that was most valuable and worthy of preservation.

We feel a natural regret when, order to give pleasure to his we may make special mention of friends, when he would have great- "Our Ship," by Harry Flash, conly preferred the rest to which he taining a beautiful tribute to President Davis, "General Polk" by What an example this steady the same brilliant author, and the pursuit of labor, and readiness to "Brave At Home," whose author oblige others, presents to younger is unknown, but whose rare beauty men, who are wrapped in a selfish entitles it to a place in any collec-

> These ommissions are the more to be regretted from the fact, that with the exception of the last named poem, they occur in the smaller work on the same subject by Mr. DeLeon, a work whose selections have been made with such exquisite taste, that each poem it contains is a gem.

That the volume of Dr. Simms does not contain these, and many other really meritorious Southern poems, must be attributed not to any want of appreciation on his part of their merits, but to incomplete mail arrangements, the failure of parties interested, to respond to his earnest appeal, and to the fact that to produce a literary work entirely free of faults, is almost as great an impossibility as to find a perfect human being. Objections have been urged against the "War Poetry of the South," on the score that the author has given undue preponderance to the poets of his native State, but the really unprejudiced judge must decide that in this case, Nature is more to blame than the Doctor.

Whatever may be the ideas of in looking over the volume of War Southern people in regard to State Poetry, we miss some of the Rights, their estimation of Statepoems most popular during the pride should be, that all of such war, and which are endeared to feeling shall be merged in one us for that reason. Among these grand consolidation—the South.

great to be passed over.

the people of the South

it. In which case, the author is rienced ossification. ready to do his work over again, est possible perfection. phase of our national existence, strangely the rear!" under the influence of which the very essence of poetry and pathos. star. Not even Tennyson in his exquisite verses, "Break, break, scribed limits of this notice, it is break, at the foot of thy crags, O impossible to mention even the

If South Carolina have pro- beauty of John Esten Cooke's wailduced a very great number of au- ing "Band in the Pines," while thors, let us thank God for the in respect of artistic finish, and fact, and set it down to the credit polished sarcasm, John R. Thompof the entire South. When that son's "England's Neutrality," State gives such authors as David- deserves high literary preëmison, Havne, Randal, Timrod and nence. In fervid delicacy, Timthe author of the present volume, rod's "Unknown Dead" is uneher claims to prominent recogni- qualed; "Somebody's Darling" tion in the world of letters are too goes home to every body's heart; Hayne's "Martyrs," and Flash's Another accusation which some "Jackson," "Zollicoffer" will encritics have brought forward a- dure as long as the history gainst this work, is that it does of their country does; the breaknot do full justice to the genius of ing of Cooke's illustrious and far traveled "Mug" has saddened This argument is answered by more hearts than that of its ownthe explanation given by Dr. er, and the biting sarcasm of the Simms in the preface of his work, "War Christian's Thanksgiving" and may be entirely removed by a would reach the heart of those to hearty response to this effort, and whom it was addressed, had not a substantial support secured for these appendages long ago expe-

The hero "who never lost a and bring it to a state of the high- fight" will be better remembered by Thompson's "On to Rich-Presented in its present form, mond," than by the regular hisit is well worthy the gratitude and torical record of the same, while affection of the people, whose brief that true gentleman, and finished history it records, and should be author has given almost too much received by them as a welcome celebrity to the runaway roué to addition to the home fireside. - whom he bade "Farewell!" May There is scarcely a poem in it, the station of that individual ever which is not associated with some remain "the front, which is

A beautiful plea has been enreader thrills or saddens as the tered by Mr. Barret in behalf of waves of memory sweeps over his noble but ill-fated Kentucky, him. Cold must be the heart, who never felt the loss of her glowhich can remain unmoved while rious Clay in its full bitterness, reading "The Return," and "On- until the dark hour when he ly one killed," which breathe the would have shone as her guiding

In the necessarily circumsea," has excelled the plaintive names of numerous poems which

or

Lie

ou

To

an fel pic

ro

en

fire

bu

ou

an

Le

th

sic

Ge

dr

W

fir

ole

an

m

st ra

sa th tr

fr

W

T

ca

N

fo

W

W

in fe

W

commend themselves not only for Melodiously it falls and floats, their beauty, but also for the subjects of which they treat, and the names which they embalm .- And wake the music of its notes. When we say that the "War All that our country's past contains, Poetry of the South" is a book which no Southern family can do Vibrating from those mellow strains. without, if it wish to preserve all They give her glorious history well, that remains of our country and our cause, their immortal memories, we assert nothing that the Throughout her borders wide apart volume does not abundantly con-

The book, and its Author are well entitled to the annexed lines. in which one of the Southern Women to whom the latter has paid such a beautiful tribute, has tried to return her thanks.

"THEY HAVE LOST A CAUSE, BUT THEY HAVE MADE A TRIUMPH!"

Untuned and mute upon the trees His country's harp neglected hung; The scattered strings he sought and Then gave their murmur to the breeze.

Or swells in diapasons deep, As through its chords the South winds sweep

All that her future held in hope, Is compassed in the silvery scope

Her triumphs and her blameless life, Till yielding to unequal strife, She grew the greater as she fell!

Those strains responsive chords should find,

In one vast harmony combined,-The outburst of the Southern heart! While Southern tongues with grateful hymns, Appreciative praises yield, And breathe them on the blazoned shield, That bears the name of Gilmore Simms!

And bind fresh bays upon his brow The symbols of his country's truth;-He won fame's laurels in his youth, But wears the garland grandlier now!

Long may his golden harp be seen-Long may his hand its music strike;-His memory, name and fame be like His State's Palmettoes evergreen!

FANNY DOWNING.

THE HAVERSACK.

insecurity of life and property" vise that reader to go no farther, at the South is so much richer who may be so absurd as to exand racier than any rebel witti- pect to find in these annals, a sincism perpetrated during the war, gle anecdote so pleasant, so novel, that we hesitate to present any- and so entertaining. thing in competition with it .- With this admonitory hint to That reverend joker Sydney Smith "the fair and gentle reader," we was certainly no mean judge of open our haversack with unaffecthumor, and he tells us that an ed diffidence. important element of it is surprise. In this view of the matter, first two anecdotes: nothing can approach the witti- One dark rainy night, the 2d

THAT "little joke" about "the cism referred to. We would ad-

Fulton, Missouri, sends us the

We will or 3d after the battle of Corinth, Lieutenant Tom Green, son of army, Colonel Branch and myour General Martin Green, (poor self called upon General Lee in Tom! he was killed at Franklin; Richmond. and a better or braver man never usual manner and told us that he fell in defence of his country,) had just received a letter from one picked up what he thought was a of his old soldiers. It ran thus, round rock and put it under the end of one of the logs of which his been fighting hard for four years, fire was made. It was not a rock, and now the Yankees have got us but a very large shell. One of in the Libby Prison. They are our Irishmen saw it after awhile, treating us awful bad. The boys and removed it saying, "faith, want you to get us out, if you can. Leftenant, the Praist told me But if you can't, just ride by the that Purgatory was full of jist Libby, and let us see you, and sich kindlin wood as that!"

On the Nashville campaign of all feel better after it." General Hood, one miserably cold, drizzling, sleety night, while we were all huddling around a campraised his head, after being in a enormous N. C. K.

OUR esteemed and gallant Irish friend Charley M. (whom the troops would call "fighting Pat") writes to us from Baltimore .-The anecdotes in the Haversack carry me back to the Army of Northern Virginia, and make me forget for a time that I am not with the brave boys in grey. I will give you some anecdotes and incidents, which may serve to diby others.

Just after the surrender of Lee's He met us in his "DEAR GENERAL: We have My impression is that the soldier was a Tar-heel.

give you a good cheer.

A CITIZEN, Dr. L-, well fire to keep from freezing to death, known to the Army of Northern old man Mercer, Company E. 1st Virginia, was passing one day on and 3d Missouri, (consolidated) the cars between Richmond and a remark that always Petersburg. He was a very small struck me as very forcible. He man, but he had on one of those high-crowned brown study for some time, and which never failed to set the boys said, "I tell you what, boys, if at their pranks. The usual cries there's any wolf in a man, this were raised, "get out of that hat," trip is going to make him how!!" "lift up that bee-gum and give us some honey," "stranger, is that a camp-kettle on your head?" &c. The Provost, at last, came round demanding passes. An old Georgian bawled out to him, "Mister, I think that thar ar two spicious kerrickters on board this here I seed them crawl under that man's hat and hide them-I know they haint got selves. passes."

JUST after the battle of Sharpsvert the sorrows of some poor burg an order came round for the fellow, as mine have been diverted promotion, from the ranks, of all while reading the facts furnished those, who had distinguished themselves in battle. The parties

th

H

ar

er

p.

IT

re

tl

e

e

W

te

Ί

C

G

d

V

h

b

d

c

I

I

recommended had, however, to tains General Beauregard's Repass an examination upon their port of the battle of Drury's rudiments of an English educa- ers see the Report from the other tion. A man appeared before the side. We copy from the LaCrosse Board as a candidate to fill a Democrat: vacant Lieutenancy in a Florida S-, questioned him pretty closely, and found him very ignorant. The man getting much excited by his failure said, "I can't read nor write; I can't understand tactics; I can't swim a stroke; I have never been vaccinated, but I can whip any man in the Board; try me and you'll see that I am a good fighter anyhow."-The challenge was not accepted, and the commission as Lieutenant was not given. This occurred at General Pryor's Headquarters, near Winchester, Va.

THE LaCrosse (Wisconsin) Democrat is full of rich things, which every friend of his country would enjoy. It must be a bad spell of the blues, which a single number would not cure. Some of the some of his adventures were very the pawn-broker. daring, he must have been the ent number of the Magazine con- pulled up by rope and pulley knowledge of tactics and the Bluff, it is but fair to let our read-

May 13th-Sent Generals Gillmore may 13th—Sent Generals Gillmore and Smith to capture Drury's Bluff.—

uestioned him pretty if found him very ignoman getting much exstailure said, "I can't rite; I can't understand can't swim a stroke; ever been vaccinated, whip any man in the me and you'll see that see that me and you'll see that me and you'll see that me and you'll see that see that me and you'll see that see that me and you'll see that me and you'll see that a see that me and you'll see that a seal that he aged the arithmet for your ontenters. He said that Beauregard had attacked him with musketry and he would not submit to it. "This," h to-day.

It will be seen that the General's habit of concentration enables him to condense in a few lines that which his great antagonist could only express in eight pages.

The phrase "gone up the spout," or simply "gone up" was often used during the war by many who hits are splendid, and almost were ignorant of its origin. Pawncome up to that practical joke at brokerage is quite an institution the Capital of the nation. In the in England, and thousands seek issue of March 12th, Brick Pom- temporary relief from cold, hunger eroy publishes General B. F. But- and want by pawning, for a cerler's Report of operations around tain amount, jewelry, clothing, Petersburg, which fell into the furniture, &c. The valuation is, hands of some Confederate scout. of course, below the value of the General Roger A. Pryor was, at article pawned, and if the article that time, acting as a scout on cannot be redeemed in a certain his own responsibility, and as time, it becomes the property of Every Saturday night there is a fortunate man, who captured the great crowd at the house of the The Petersburg Express pawn-broker. The articles pledged first published this Report, early are valued, labelled and put in a in February, 1864. As the pres- box. When the box is full, it is and more especially of London, or for good behavior?" "gone up the spout" is but another form of expression for "lost," "ruined," "past out of our control." In a similar sense, the phrase was used in our service.

A correspondent tells us of a play upon the words by one of Wheeler's cavalry after the surrender at Greensboro.

As the cavalry were wending their way homeward with dejected and downcast looks, they reached a cross-road where a signboard was nailed to a tree and rude letters carved on it, TO LIBERTY. This was the name of a little country village not far from Greensboro. One of the troopers dismounted and turned the board vertically, so that the finger pointed upwards. When asked what he did that for, he replied that as "liberty had gone up, the signboard ought to point in the right direction!" When will the time come for changing the sign-board?

From N. C. sources we get the next two anecdotes; and as they are somewhat personal, we suppress the names.

very much impressed with the ele- the charge. to inspect all his finery, the old charge endways!"

through a spout to the upper story. soldier accosted him with, "Mis-Hence with the poor of England, ter, does you hold yer offis for life

> One of our neighbors was very ingenious in keeping out of the army under some of the provisions of the Conscript Act. He raised pork for the army, and he raised corn, flour and potatoes for the army. In short, he did everything but shoulder his musket and fight with the army. At last, finding that the conscription would catch him, he finally raised a company of Home Guards. As he knew nothing about tactics, his attempts at drilling were very funny. One day, wishing his company to wheel, but becoming embarrassed, and forgetting the word of command, he cried out, "come round like a gate, boys!" He was known ever after as General Gates, of the Home Guards.

This incident will recall to many of the old soldiers of Lee's army, the command for falling into ranks that used to be given by a gallant colonel, who had been a very successful statesman, "make two rows, boys, make two rows."

An Alabama colonel, who was as good, true and brave as he was An officer marched up to a cer- ignorant of tactics, was marching tain Depot some of the "Junior his men by the flank when a hot Reserves," "the seed corn," as fire was opened upon them. Gen. Mr. Davis called them. He was Rodes dashed up and gave the very gaudily dressed, with a great order to charge. The colonel deal of lace, braid, and brass fix- looked embarrassed, not undertures about him, and with a large standing that the General, of feather in his hat. One of John-course, intended him to first throw ston's rough rebs seemed to be his men into line before making The order being gance of the grand officer, and af- again repeated, the colonel said, ter walking around him the better "General, do you mean for me to pile

filli

fra

pie

bod

bre

sw

Al

vic

the

del

ton

am

ma

mı

Th

co

In

Ba

Is

te

au

at

on pr

th

O

ar

H

pl ch

hi

ti

of

p

A

h fe

h

g

n

h

There is scarcely any evil that (on his piece of charlatanry.

diers of a war-speech.

comic-kind reminds us of the Hav- flourish of trumpets. ersack; and because it is a fact, as many a soldier in that fine regiment commanded by the dashing the following: the way, is all of a clever fellow, life. and a good soldier. During this Pegasian steed-high has not some accompanying good. climbing the glorious mount) when The late war exposed so many most unexpected to every one, a fire-eaters and spread-eagle ora- vicious ass immediately in his tors that the people will not be rear, vociferated in drowning aceasily duped again-at least, by cents, which perhaps might have the same class of grandiloquent been endured, had not a waggish speakers. Certain it is that long voice from the line, in clear penebefore the war closed, the soldiers trating tones, shouted, "one at a looked upon a war-speech, espe- time! one at a time!" It was too cially if peculiarly fiery, as a rich much. The enraged officer aboutpiece of fun. They enjoyed it, faced his caparisoned steed-drew. but very much as they would the his revolver, and fired into the antricks of the mountebank, know- imal. At this juncture, the regiing that 'twas only a successful mental line swayed to and fro like a reed in the gale. The first A friend sends us from Marian- fire produced a wound only; but na, Florida, a practical illustra- dashing in upon the persistent ention of the reception by our sol- emy with one of those irresistible concussive charges, he finally end-Looking over the incidents of ed the victim with a couple other the trying days, "so sad-so fresh, discharges, amid the waving of the days that are no more," the the colors, the hilarious shouts following, among others, of the of the command, and a gentle

From Charleston, S. C., we get

Colonel Maury, of Mobile, will I send the Haversack two incireadily vouch for, we are half in- dents, which I have had from eyeclined to offer it. It occurred witnesses, that illustrate the heabout this wise: Owing to the ab-roism and devotion which was sence or indisposition of the field manifested in the late war by officers, the command devolved many who were lowest in rank, upon the senior captain, who, by and from the humblest walks of

During a contest between the temporary elevation to superior batteries on Sullivan's Island, and command, an important order ar- the iron-clad fleet in front of rived, which directed a movement Charleston, a shell from the Weeindicative of an engagement. The hawken struck the muzzle of a officer drew the troops in line, and Columbiad in Fort Moultrie, and with shield and buckler on, rode glancing down exploded on an amin superb style to the front, to munition chest at the side of the address them on the nature of the chamber. A terrible scene followmove in question. He had as- ed, the explosion communicating cended into the ascending series from one chest to another, hurling filling the air with clouds of sand, the countenance of the officer .fragments of timber, burning The dawning consciousness in his pieces of clothing, and mangled face deepened into earnestness, bodies. There was a moment of and half-turning on the table, he breathless horror as the explosion murmured "Lieutenant, is Fort swept the right battery of the fort. Sumter taken?" Almost at the mouth of the service magazine it stayed, and when the smoke cleared away, amid the one version of an oft-told anecdebris of shattered carriages, and dote: torn up parapets and traverses, amid the wounded and dead, a man stood upon the lid of an ammunition chest holding it down. This man was private Shepherd, company C. 1st South Carolina your State?" A rough looking Infantry.

premature discharge occurred as applied to our sores. the cartridge was driven home .--One man at the muzzle was instantly killed, the other had his arm blown off at the shoulder .-He was borne to the hospital, and fellow was still lying on the sur- from Manchester.

piles of balls in every direction, support in life. Then he caught

E. C. E.

From Berryville (Va.) we get

On one occasion, as a portion of our Virginia cavalry was passing by some North Carolina infantry, one of our boys said, "halloo, tarheels, have you any tar left in fellow straightened up and cooly The next incident took place at replied, "not a single drap. Our Battery Bee, also on Sullivan's Guvnor has sold it all to the There was a night-at- Government to pour on the fields, tack on Fort Sumter, and the bat- whar you cavalry have to fight to teries opened hastily with shell make you stick better nor you and ricochet firing. The gunners have been a doin." As we had at one piece, at Battery Bee, been licked a short time before, omitted to sponge the gun, and a we felt the additional tar plaster

> We get an account of a similar hit which comes to us from Hudsonville, Mississippi:

After the close of the seven placed under the influence of days' fight around Richmond, and chloroform while the stump of when Ransom's North Carolina his arm was amputated. After a brigade (of which I was then a time, the firing ceased, and the member) was en route to Drury's officer in command of the com- Bluff from Malvern Hill, we came pany went down to the hospital. upon some Virginians encamped As he entered, the amputation upon the Richmond and Petershad been performed, and the poor burg turn-pike about two miles There began geon's table, slowly recovering at once the usual running fire of his senses. As he opened his lan- wit and sarcasm between the guid eyes, he glanced for a mo- troops of the two States. As we ment at the place where his arm were approaching the Virginians, was wanting. Probably with it I noticed a big, burly, darkhad gone his whole capital and visaged Lieutenant step out before

reg

me

had

wo

tai

Co

be

clo

inc

ma

hir

the ax.

did

im

itie

ou

reg

wh

ma

wi

pu

col

ho

ba

ga wh

for th an

7Z2 ne

go

ki

fo

th

do

th

do

]

(

his companions, as though he was against a stump. to be the champion of their side. broke and exposing the contents He was of so dark a complexion to the air, the stump was soon in as to indicate descent from Poca- a blaze. The frightened Captain hontas or of some one else not be- took time by the fore-lock and longing to the Caucasian race .- cried out. "I surrenders my com-The wink was given to our "ac- pany mit you." knowledged wit" and he moved over to the side next to the Virginians. The dark-visaged Lieutenant noticed the movement and at once accosted "old Stonewall," the name by which our wag was known.

" Halloo, Tar-Lieutenant. heel, did you know that Tar River was burnt up."

"No I did'nt, hoss, Stonewall. is it true?"

Lieutenant. there and saw it burn up."

it is too true, for your face looks the generosity of the enemy, as it badly smoked." G. P. T.

One of Forrest's former Captains sends us an anecdote of the usual exhibition of pluck. great cavalry leader:

ford often played the "bluffgame" very daring enemy. very successfully upon his bluecoated antagonists. While on his from Maryland, '63, our regiment, memorable raid to Athens, Pulas- 17th Virginia cavalry, was in ki, and other points along the rear. Lt. O. K. Pate, Cadet, V. railroad, he came to a block-house M. I., doing duty with our regiheld by a Dutch captain and his ment, remained on the Maryland company from Fader-land. Mor- side until the regiment had passton's splendid guns could make no ed midway the stream, and was impression upon the block-house. pursued by some federal cavalry, So old Beford hoisted a flag of who reached the bank nearly as truce and went in person to the soon as Pate reached the water .--Dutch captain and demanded his They sent a volley of balls after stoutly replied the Dutchman .- not a ball took effect. Pate turn-"Very well," said old Bedford, ed in his saddle and waved a sa-

The bottle J. L. L. Tuscumbia, Ala.

A friend tells us that a Dutchman, captured in the Valley of Virginia, being asked to what Corps he belonged, replied "me fights mit Seigel and me runs mit Banks." We hope that the worthy Dutchman is not now running in the same leash with the Great Commissary.

Our kind friend, T. H. B. M. "Oh yes, I was of Lubeck, West Virginia, sends us the next two anecdotes, the Stonewall. "Well, I am afraid first of which is as creditable to is to the gallantry of Lt. Pate. The truly brave always honor an unhave known several instances of It is well known that old Bed- soldiers refusing to fire upon a

In the withdrawal of our troops "1 no do dats," him, but to the amazement of all "I'll burn you out with Greek lute at the astounded party. Not fire." Saying this, he took out a another shot was fired. He was bottle of phosphorus and threw it allowed to pass over and join his regiment, much to the astonishment of all.

Col. McC. (afterwards General) had a private detailed to do some work about his quarters; the detail came with ax as directed .-Col. M. pointed out what should be done-detail seemed to make a close examination of the task, and inquired, doubtfully, "Can one joyed a quiet joke. man do it?" Col M. answered him that one man could. "Well, then," said detail, shouldering his ax, "I'll go back to camp," and did so, leaving the Col. under the impression, that his physical abilities were not questioned.

From Columbus, Ga., we get our next anecdote:

regiment was court-martialed for direction. ness about some chickens."

Comrade. for it."

doin' it!"

doin' it.

An ex-chaplain sends from Lexington (Va.) the following anecdotes:

Our noble old Commander-in-Chief was always so occupied with his many cares and responsibilities, that he had but little time during the war, for social intercourse, and yet he very much en-

Witness the following: Upon one occasion, while inspecting the lines near Petersburg, with several General officers, he asked General - if a certain work which he had directed him to complete as soon as possible, had been finished. General looked rather confused, but answered that it was. General Lee A soldier of the 10th Georgia at once proposed to ride in that On getting to the what he called "playing quarter- place, it was found that no promaster," that is, for taking things gress had been made on the work, without paying for them. His since General Lee was last there. punishment, among other things, General — at once apologized consisted in marking time for an and said that he had not been on hour each day on the head of a that part of the line for some time, barrel. While he was thus en- but that Captain ---- had told gaged one day, a comrade passed him that the work was completed. by and accosted him with, "Joe, General Lee made no reply at the what are you marking time there moment, but not long after begun for?" Joe answered as well as to compliment General ---- on the difficulty of keeping his bal- the splendid horse he rode. "Yes ance would allow, "don't know, sir," replied General ----, "he 'zackly, believe its some foolish- is a very fine animal-he belongs to my wife." "A remarkably "Well they have fine horse," returned General Lee, got no right to make you do that "but not a safe one for Mrs. ---. kind of a thing. There's no law He is too mettlesome by far, and you ought to take the mettle out "Don't care whether of him before you permit her to there's any law for it or not, I'se a ride him. And let me suggest, General — that an admirable Poor Joe! he has many sympa- way of doing that is to ride him a thizers. Law or no law, we'se a good deal along these trenches."-The face of the gallant General

b

tl

L

u

th

W

te

tl fin

C

of

P

th ar po m de

Fu

tw

Ch

wl

fev

loo

the

yar

all

ins

car

We

pas

to 1

the

aro

he

—iı

H

Bro mer

adopted the suggestion.

cal problem. gave a solution of the problem strange dreams."

- turned crimson; General and retired-the officers hoping Lee's eyes twinkled with mischief, that he had not noticed the jug. no further allusion was made to The next day one of these officers, the matter, but General ---- in presence of the others, related to General Lee a very strange Late one night, General Lee had dream he had had the night beoccasion to go into a tent where fore. "That is not at all surseveral officers were sitting around prising," replied the General, a table, on which was a stone jug "when young gentlemen discuss and two tin cups, busily engaged at midnight, mathematical probin the discussion of a mathemati- lems, the unknown quantities of The General ob- which are a stone jug and two tin tained the information he desired, cups, they may expect to have

NEW YORK CORRESPONDENCE.

"comes in like a lion and goes out this will meet the necessities of like a lamb," but as applied to the the case, it is impossible to say March of '67, the proverb seems until its completion. Some means like to prove but a half truth. Its of relieving Broadway, at almost exit, by all appearances, will be any cost, is anxiously canvassed as lion-like as its entry. There by the public here; especially as have been no less than four snow- it is thought that the new Poststorms here in the course of the Office-the present one on Pine month, and the streets of the city is a disgrace to a great metropolis have been in a condition formi- -will be built on this street. I dable alike to pedestrians and ve- know no better remedy, by-thehicles. Carts, trucks and wagons way, for provincial egotism than stuck fast in huge holes in the a walk in the famous thoroughcross-streets, and blocking the way fare which is the boast of this conto a long line of other such vehicles, tinent. The traveler who lands have been of no uncommon occur- at the Battery, indeed, where the rence. Of all these cross-streets, Fort of New Amsterdam once Fulton is probably the most stood, will be little struck at first junction with Broadway, so great walk or the magnificence of the is the jam of vehicles and the buildings. But the scene betransverse streams of foot-passen- comes gayer and more animated gers, that it has been found nec- as he advances. Men of every essary to erect a bridge over the name and nation jostle each other

"March," says the proverb, modation of the latter. How far At the point of its either with the crowds on the sidegreat thoroughfare for the accom- in the double tide that streams

S

1

S

,-

e

S

I

9+

n

1-

n-

ls

10 ce

st

6.

he

e-90

ed

ry

er ms back and forth, and palaces begin that fifty years more will witto rise on either hand. Yonder is ness changes still more surprising: the Bowling Green, where the and in this connection I wish to Liberty boys pulled down the stat- give you some account of a new ue of King George, and here on species of light which will doubtthe right is the famous Wall Street, less, after a time, be used for tors most do congregate. Fur- -certainly a wonderful invention, the widest portion of the Island, city. passed his early life in New York, graphs. -in the one remembered spot, "Where the mossy marbles rest On the lips that he has prest In their bloom.

And the names he loved to hear Have been carved for many a year On the tomb."

where millionaires and specula- lighting up this magnificent street ther on is the Astor House, the though, hitherto, it has attracted first of the large Hotels in Broad- little general notice. The invenway, and on the right, near the tor is a Mr. Wilde of Liverpool, Court House, rise the marble walls and a complete machine, made of Stewart's retail establishment. under his directions, is expected Perhaps a mile further yet, at to be on exhibition soon in this Of course, I can attempt are the splendid Hotels, the Metro- no detailed history of the discovpolitan and St. Nicholas, and close ery or explanation of its philosoby the most noted places of amuse- phy; but in a general way, it may As a rule the crowd is be said that the light is electric densest between Washington and and that the discoverer has found Fulton streets, on which are the a method of producing electricity two great markets of those names. in quantities and of an intensity Change and progress are every- hitherto unknown, "by the use of The most striking of the feeble electrical currents upon. few old landmarks that remain, powerful magnets." The effects looks out at you from between are truly astonishing. The light the iron railings of Trinity Church- produced rivals the dazzling lumiyard, where, in the very midst of nosity of the sun. "At the disall this busy life, the half-defaced tance of a quarter of a mile, it inscriptions on the tombstones throws shadows from the flames carry you back to the days of '76. of street lamps upon a wall." "It Were an octogenarian, who had beats the sun at taking photo-In twenty seconds it to visit the scenes of his youth, in darkens sensitized paper, held at the midst of the unfamiliar world a distance of two feet from the around him, it would be here that light, as effectually as one minute he would be most likely to linger of full, noonday sunshine." This actinic property renders it specially valuable to photographers, two of whom in England are already applying it to the practical purposes of their art. Twelve such lights, it is estimated, would illuminate But wonderful as are the chang- Broadway from the Battery to es which have taken place in Fourteenth Street, with a light so Broadway within the memory of powerful that print could easily be men still living, it is probable read by it at the distance of a quar-

N

for

of (

mer

cou

it is ent.

crlt

beli

bein

tion

gua

free

it.

his

cou

the skir

a la

beli

bac

and resc

ind

the

woi

age

pro

pec

pro

ceiv

is a

to t ed

The

is le

tacl his this rais

tha mei

N

ty in this country-though not a by a crowd of assailants. very recent invention-is likewise a good deal talked of here at this the country that have lately suffertime. The daily increasing importance of easy and quick transportation between New York and Brooklyn and back, has led to many different proposals to meet a need so much felt by the public. Perhaps the one most in favor is the proposition to construct an underground "Pneumatic Railway" between the two cities; of which the motive power, as the name implies, is to be the pressure of the atmosphere at one end, driving the train through a tunnel exhausted of air. The experiment, I learn, has been tried successfully in England.

Since their repeated "fiascos," most people, I imagine, are heartily sick of the subject of the Fenians. They refuse to be ignored here, however, and it is impossible for a general news-letter always to pass them over in silence.

Last Monday, the Brotherhood Patrick's day, St. which fell this year on Sunday, of the Emerald Isle floated alongside the stars and stripes, and the shamrock, "the green, immortal shamrock "was sported by not a did not pass off without "a row," ter of a mile. The expense, it is said in which a poor carter and some would be less than for gas-lights, for dozen or more policemen were the same distance. Another novel- well nigh cut and beaten to death

Of the many places throughout ed from flood or fire, New York has not been the least severely visited. Almost as I write, the smoking ruins of the Winter Gardens Theatre, on Broadway, tell the tale of a fresh disaster .-The fire when first discovered had made but little headway, and a couple of buckets of water, at that time, would have quenched it. By one of those accidents, however, in which devout people see the finger of Providence, there was no water on the premises, and when water was brought, it was too late to save the building .-The tragedian Booth, brother to Booth the assassin, is reported to have lost $75,000 by the casualty. A neighboring building, the Southern Hotel, was saved with difficulty by the exertions of the firemen, and has sustained considerable damage from the flood of water poured into and upon it from the engines.

I take pleasure in closing this letter with a mention of the fact and in numbers at least, showed that there is, in this community, quite a formidable organization. a wide-spread feeling of sympathy On Court House square the flag for the present destitution in the South. Many contributions have already been made for the relief of the sufferers, and benevolent men and women have not at all relaxed their efforts in behalf of few well-dressed and well-looking their fellow countrymen who are men. A grand procession parad-crying to them for bread. Heaven ed in Broadway, and the inevita-speed the day when a returning ble dinner, at Delmonico's, was sense of justice and the charity which suffereth long, and is kind, the scene of the usual number of shall once more unite us in a hapdaring toasts. Of course the day py, free, and equal sisterhood of

EDITORIAL.

NOTHING has gratified us more, for a long time, than the address promptly endorsed by General A. of General Hampton to the Freed- R. Wright, of the Augusta (Geo.) men at Columbia. It is kind. courteous and conciliating: while it is frank, manly, and independ-There is none of the hypocritical cant of having "always believed slavery to be a sin, and being glad because of its abolition." This is simply the language of the demagogue. The freedman will not be deceived by The thought must arise in his mind that a man, so believing, could have freed his slaves, and thereby have cleared his own skirts from the stain. There was a large portion of our people, who believed that slavery was a drawback to our material prosperity, and to the full development of our But there were few resources. indeed, who did not think that the sudden freedom of the negroes would not be of incalculable damage to them.

Nor does General Hampton profess that he is glad at the prospect of universal suffrage. profound thinker, like him, perceives that the elective franchise are so much concerned to proed and undisciplined minds.- have taken, this year, by this General Hampton's address was Chronicle and Sentinel.

So far as we have been able to ascertain, every Southern newspaper edited by a Confederate soldier, has followed the lead of these distinguished officers. The prominent idea held out by Generals Hampton and Wright, is that the freedmen is to be trained to feel that he is a Southern man, indentitied with the South in its interests. its trials, and its sufferings. He is to be taught to feel that he is no alien upon the soil, but that this is his country and his home.

We think that it doos not require much education for the negro to learn that while every pound of cotton, which he raises, pays a tax, "the man and brother" from New England gets a bounty for every fish which he catches, as well as payment for the fish itself. It will not require much education for the negro to learn, that a tax upon industry always falls most heavily upon the laborer. He will soon learn that while the philanthropists is a solemn trust to be confided cure homesteads for the unto uneducated men, with untrain- fortunate freedmen, that they The unprincipled demagogue, who cotton tax, twenty-four millions is loudest in his professions of at- of dollars from the South. If tachment to them, will make them these benevolent gentlemen would his dupes and his victims. All combine the proceeds from the this, the General knows, and he cotton tax and the fishing bounty, raises a voice of warning against there would be enough to purthat dangerous class of base, bad chase a farm for every freedman in the entire South, who is the

the

if t tere

pul

the bet

we

the

ter

der ofe

he

the pat

thi

no

In

tha

CO

no

sa

liq

sa

th of

U

tr

CO

ca

gı

bı di

M

h

T er C

to which he belongs.

to communities or to individuals. in the Union.

The Southern white man is the photograms. At any rate, it is poverished country. the duty of those, who have the superior education and mental situation. grace before meat, and Hail The plain common sense view of head of a family. We believe Columbia as a thanksgiving after that the negro will learn these it. Better a military ruler for a truths very rapidly, and that he century, than a single term of will have no faith in those tender such a man! The military ruler professions of love for him, which has no partisans to reward, and are exercised in increasing the no enmities to gratify. The fair poverty of the desolated country presumption is that he will be just and impartial, having no con-The freedman will be a demo- trolling motive but a sense of crat, and will assuredly vote duty. There is not one of the against all class legislation, all five Districts in so unhappy a tariffs, and all bounties, whether condition to-day, as is Tennessee

It becomes then the imperative natural, as he is the best and duty of voters to choose true men, truest friend of the negro. The not turn-coats and weather-cocks, two races may live together in men whose consistent unionism peace and harmony, feeling their will be satisfactory to the domimutual dependence, and blessing nant party. Such men as goverone another: if bad feeling is not nors, representatives and legislastirred up by our demagogues, in tors will not be intent upon perconjunction with the pious mis- sonal aggrandizement and buildsionaries, who are roaming over ing up a party, but will strive the country, taking from the earnestly to promote the happinegroes their little money and ness and prosperity of their sorely giving them in exchange-their disturbed, perplexed, and im-

If the poet (?) who sends his culture, to set an example of fair contribution to a periodical, would dealing, moderation, forbearance, reflect that possibly others too and kindness. The disfranchised may feel the divine afflatus and class have no political aspirations, ring the musical chimes also; and no lamentations over their much trouble would be saved to There is not one of both author and editor. But the them, who is not willing to have kindness in sending the contribuas a ruler, an original union man tion is almost counterbalanced, of principle and integrity, such as when the author writes a second Moore, of North Carolina, Perry, letter requesting for the sake of of South Carolina, Jenkins, of euphony, the preposition "with" Georgia, and Sharkey, of Miss- in the 3d line of the 42d canto be issippi. But we fear that we may changed into "by;" and then get an old fire-eater newly dressed sends a third letter asking what up in the star-spangled banner, has become of his poem; and folwith an eagle feather in his hat, lows that up with a fourth, indigwho says Yankee-doodle as a nantly demanding its return .-

if the poem is good, 'tis to the in- and not to the army in the field. terest of the editor himself to A lady, who had written a publish it: and if 'tis not good, really valuable book, once told us of excellent poetry on hand, which he professed to review. he hopes to publish some time, if It is plain to us that our excelliquid measure.

THE Methodist of New York says that he regrets to perceive there used to be a Military Acadethat the land loved by the Editor my, and it may be there yet for of this Magazine is not the whole aught we know. (For some years, contemporary wrote a kind letter, know what changes may have tabrethren. Tipperary.

the matter would seem to be, that longed to the "home guards,"

the less correspondence the better, that an unfavorable criticism of between poet and editor. Now her book would be more acceptawe happen to know something of ble, than the usual stereotyped the perplexities of one of the lat- phrases of commendation, which ter class. He has told us confi- proved that the critic had not dentially that he has a great deal even cut the pages of the book, the writers do not become too im- lent contemporary had not read patient. But that he has a bushel, our Magazine. For although we three pecks and one quart of the are exceedingly national, yet we "so-called," about which, he hopes are not aware of manifesting any no correspondence will take place. special partiality for Massachu-In answer to our inquiry, he said, setts; so that we cannot be justly that he had used dry measure in accused of unduly loving "the computation; because there was troublesome section of the United not flow enough about the afore- States." Probably, we can best said verses to permit him to use explain our position to our worthy brother by "a little anecdote."

On the banks of the Hudson United States, but only a rather we were debarred the privilege of troublesome section of it. Our visiting that section, and don't proposing an exchange, and we ken place.) In that Academy cordially accepted his offer. We there was a French Professor, candidly confess that we have a Monsieur M-, as much distingreat liking for our Methodist guished for his irritability as for They made such splen- his learning. One of his pupils did rebel soldiers! Why, a rebel was a certain Jack Foster, whose Methodist had no more fear in cool, imperturbable effrontery was him than a wild Irishman from unsurpassed and unsurpassable. From this attack On one occasion, Jack's exercise upon us, we judge that the North- in French, written on the blackern Methodists belong also to the board, was a rare medley of bad Church militant. However, as English, worse Latin, and worst opening fire under flag of truce, French. Monsieur M--- looked was so universally reprobated by at the black-board, thrust his both sides, we rather incline to hands deep into his pockets, (as think that our worthy brother be. he always did when angry,) open-

de

W

he

W

pe

fr

ar

bı

m

ti

re

W

m ti

la

of

W

W

F

lie

W

m

h

S

pi

p tl

fe

0 b

ti

h

to re

tl

81

li

C

ther Foster, dat ish not French, Carolinas. the world.

Moreover, we are getting old ed his eyes and roared out in a Sherman when he was sweeping voice like a Bengal tiger, "Mis- through Georgia and the two tish not Latin, tish not English; Owing to the rheumatism aforesacré, diable, what ish dat?"- said, we move along slowly and Jack examined his writing very painfully, but "with the best inleisurely, and then calmly and tentions in the world "-wondersweetly said, "Oh, I perceive that ing all the while at the agility of I have written in Latin instead of our more supple neighbors. There in French; being very familiar is no use for any Circus to come with both languages, I sometimes South. We have men so agile confound one with the other .- that the most expert man in the Excuse me, Monsieur M-, my ring would feel ashamed of his intentions are the best in the clumsy attempts at "ground and world!" So, good brother, we lofty tumbling," after witnessing say, having been equally familiar their wonderful performances .with rebellious and with loyal One of the things, which we are sentiments, we sometimes con- too stiff and too rheumatic to do, found the one with the other .- is to toss a somersault and turn But our intentions are the best in our back on this dear old land, which gave us birth.

We will tell our esteemed conand we have been afflicted with temporary what the "loyal North" rheumatism a long time; which used to think of renegades, ave affliction, rebel campaigning for and what the really noble men four years did not much improve. and women there think of them We have not, therefore, the aston- yet. When John Adams went to ishing activity of some of our England, after our independence friends in Dixie, and cannot, then had been gained, George III. make such neat somersaults as jested with him one day upon his they, nor can we play supple- being under French influence .jacks so well. Our old leaders in His noble reply was, "I must secession, our fire-eaters, our Yan- avow to your Majesty that I have kee-haters have thrown a somer- no attachment, but to my own sault, and are now "loyal-leaguers country." The King answered and persecuted Union men."- quickly, "an honest man will Our old negro-traders, that des- never have any other." It is well pised class of "dealers in flesh known that the great painter, and blood" have become philan- Benjamin West, of Pennsylvania, thropists and friends of "the went to England before the Ameriman and brother." The most can rebellion. The kind patroncruel and tyrannical masters are age of the King and his business those, who have always regarded relations induced him to remain slavery as a sin and wished for its in London, after the war broke abolition. The Sherman-Bill has out. One day, some Courtiers developed as much activity in who were jealous of West's influtaking the back track, as did Bill ence with the King, spoke of a defeat of the Americans, while up from our destitute homes, in West was in the royal presence, behalf of those who have thus hoping that his sorrow thereat made charity doubly noble by acwould offend the monarch. West companying it with those assurperceiving frankly to George, "I am a loyal strip misfortune of half its terand grateful subject to my King: rors and render calamity endurbut I can never rejoice at any able. misfortunes, which befall my native land." The King cordially replied, "a noble answer, Mr. West, and I assure you that no man will ever fall, in my estimation, because he loves his native land." A kingly speech worthy of the monarch of a great nation! We are not so sectional as our worthy contemporary thinks .-For we believe that there are millions of men in the loyal North, who respond to the grand sentiment of George III.: and who have as much respect for the Southerner, who stands in his lot prepared to share the fate of his people, as they have contempt for these mountebanks, who, through fear of confiscation or greed of office, are stultiflying themselves by insincere declarations and dishonest professions.

The St. Louis (Mo.) Southern Relief Association contributed $10,000 for the relief of the destitute in North Carolina. has been distributed at points seto parties named by him.

recipients of this bounty, take the latter figures, the cotton tax this occasion, in the name of the will amount to $24,000,000. This suffering, to return their thanks comes out of the South, and bears to the generous donors. The re- specially hard upon the laborers lief it has afforded, is, doubtless, of the South. considerable, and many a prayer noble thing for the philanthropists their object, said ances of blessed sympathy, which We learn from a private letter from Boston, Massachusetts, under date of April 2d, that up to that time, there had been contributed, in that city, $35,638 for the relief of the destitute in the South. This is nearly one-fourth of the entire amount raised in St. Louis for the same object.

We are truly glad to note this generous donation from Boston. It will bring relief to many a suffering household. But we are sorry that in the meetings at which these funds were raised, many things were said, which were as false, as they were harsh and unfeeling. We would commend to the notice of these slanderers what St. Paul says. "And though I bestow all my goods to the poor, and though I give my body to be burned and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing."

The Monthly Circular, for April, This of Norton, Slaughter & Co., estimates the cotton crop for the year lected by Ex-Governor Vance and ending September 1867, at 1,-800,000 bales. The general esti-The Governor and the Editor, mate, however, is 2,000,000. At It would be a of thankfulness and praise will go of Boston, to exert themselves to des try

cor

stu

SOL cha

WI eye

pe

cle nes

coc bes

peo

elu

she der

ubi str

ion

equ

pla

per que

the

kir Be

Le: coa

the

his

tur he thi eye aw

Al

No

Th

M

Th

SIL

011 1 cei pre wh pu

U the

procure the abolition of this tax, received, will extend through this and to divide the proceeds result- volume. ing from it, among those who are sketches, by a distinguished scholsuffering for bread. followed up by earnest efforts for pear during the year. the repeal of bounties, tariffs, &c., myth.

Though we are opposed to fiction, and especially to serial stories, we yield to the public taste in such matters, and will begin in our next issue, a story of Maryland life before the war, which will run through the voltains the first of a series of sketches of travel in Great Britain, by John R. Thompson, the eminent Poet, so long the able Editor of Literary Messenger. ger, which have been so favorably tinue their contributions.

We have also Italian If this is ar and statesman, which will ap-

A Paris correspondent has been we will believe that the humani- engaged to give the most intertarianism of Boston is not a esting features of the Exposition, or World's Fair, and especially, the facts most interesting to agriculturists.

> In Agriculture, we will diversify the essays of our most scientific Professors in Colleges, with those of the best practical planters.

Sketches of homesteads and reume. Our present number con- markable localities, and biographies of men eminent in letters and arms, will have a prominent place in the Monthly.

The military character will still The be preserved, and the rank and Spanish sketches, by Mr. Barrin- file are earnestly invited to con-

BOOK NOTICES.

INGEMISCO, By FADETTE. New York, Blelock & Co., 1867.

We feel a special interest in this book since 'tis written by a young lady, who, on the mother's side, has in her veins the noblest Revolutionary blood of Delaware, and who, on her father's side, is allied to an equally honorable ancestry

We give below an extract as a specimen of the tone and style of the fair author. Page 109.

"The sunset glow is in the air, and its glory rests upon the Righi. Solitude remained below, in the woodland recesses. Here is a motley multitude assembled. In the background, with the indispensable accompaniments of stables, stable-boys, din and bustle, stands the inn, about the doors and balconies of which lounge guides variously engaged in eating, drinking, smoking, to an equally honorable ancestry of which lounge guides variously engaged in eating, drinking, smoking, and gossiping, while from a window in the descendants of those, who won the country for us, should have a controlling influence upon the public mind, when that influence is pure and good.

of which lounge guides variously engaged in eating, drinking, smoking, and gossiping, while from a window in marvelous proximity to the pointed, over-hanging roof, leans a bonny maiden, carrying on, as she airs ber blankets and her linen, a stealthy sports the black leather small-clothes and white stockings, the scarlet vest and long blue open jacket, of Schwyz. In the fore-ground are groups of every description and of almost every country. Here a Russian princess with her description and of almost every country. Here a Russian princess with her noble retinue discourses in astounding consonants. There a knot of German students in gay pedestrian garb, personating in appearance every phase of character, from the fleree bandit Don Whiskerado to the fair-haired, mildeyed poet or musician. A Tyrolese peddler, chamois-booted, his grave, clear-cut features looking national beacheath the shade of the national blackcock plume, displays his wealth of beauty to a circle of admiring country-people. Here a family of English exclusives, in the well-to-do, over-dressed shopkeeper style, upon the approach of our party turn the significant shoulder. Here, there, and everywhere, the ubiquitton Yankee, "doing" the Alps, striding about, a very lord of creation, striding about, a very lord of creation, ejecting his tobacco-juice and his opinions with the same determination, equally careless whether in or out of place, and not to be daunted by the reparet, and not to be admitted by the re-peated rebuffs of the English exclu-sives, whom he leaves at last with tne query, addressed with insinuating po-liteness to the red-headed dandy of the party:

the party:
"I say, stranger, did you have any kin-folks mixed up in the Revolution?
Because in our picture of the battle of Lexington up to hum, there's a redcoat a streaking it before our bayonets, the living image of your grandfather."
"I'von which information concerning

Upon which information concerning the family tree, the dandy discontinues his employment of switching at the turf blossoms with his cane, raises his head and stares in astonithment through a piece of glass stuck in his eye. then saunters contemptously then saunters contemptuously

-0-A BOOK FOR EVERY SOUTH-ERN FIRESIDE.

All Purchasers Aid in Educating the Daughters of the South

Now ready in a neat and attractive volume of 456 pages, 120., price in cloth, $1.50; thick paper, cloth extra $2,50; sup. cal-paper, cloth beveled, gilt, $3.00.

The Southern Poems of the War.

COLLECTED AND ARRANGED BY

MISS EMILY V. MASON.

These Poems, the offspring of Southern Hearts, sung by Southers Firesides, and Southern Cump Fires, are Affectionately Inscribed TO THE SOUTHERN SOL-DIERS, by one who Admired their Heroism, Sympathized with their Successes, Mourned their Sufferings and Shared their Privations.

In the beginning of the war I conceived the design of collecting and preserving the various War Poems, which (born of the excited state of the public mind,) then inundated our newspapers. papers-Traveling since the war through many portions of the South, I have heard every where the wish expressed that these Poems should be collected and published in a form 10 cheap as to be accessible to all. This desire I have endeavored to fulfil.

Besides a "Memorial" volume,

Besides a "Memorial" volume, to preserve these "songs," expressive of the hopes and triumphs and sorrows of a "lost cause," I have another design—to and by its sale the Education of the Daughters of our desolate Land; to Fit a Certain Number for Teachers, that they may take to their homes and spread amongst the different Southern States the knowledge of these accomplishments which also may those accomplishments which else may those accomplishments which else may be denied them.

I appeal to all good people to aid me in this effort to provide for the women of the South, (the future mothers of the country,) the timely boon of education. Many of these children are the orphans of soldiers, from whom they have inherited nothing but an honorable name, and the last hours of more than one of whom I was enabled to soothe by the promise that I would do something for the little ones they left behind them. That promise, I trust, this humble effort may enable me in part to redeem.

E. V. M.

part to redeem. E. V. M.

Francisco and others, can booksellers, Canvassers and others, to whom a liberal disco un will be made, MURPHY & CO., Publishers, Booksellers and Stationers, 182 Baltimore Street, Baltimore.

Freely mailed on receipt of the department vision.

advertised price.

This is the Publishers notice of Miss Mason's excellent collection of poems. We learn that in the second edition, which is nearly ready, all that was objectionable in the first, has been removed .--The book has been enlarged by the introduction of many choice poems and those of less merit have been left out.

Miss Mason's Orphan School is in successful operation. She has six pupils from North Carolina, who are being educated out of the proceeds of this book. We wish it the success which it so richly deserves.

THE HOME MONTHLY, Nashville, Tenn. Price $3 a year. Forty-eight pages of reading matter.

This beautifully printed and ably conducted Monthly is under Chemistry; Victor Hugo as a the auspices of our Methodist Novelist; The New America of brethren. We notice among its Mr. Dixon; Book Notices. contributors the names of men J. B. McFerrin, D.D., for his ment of Jefferson Davis." stout, unmovable Southernism .ly be won by a word of kindness; South. and our New York friend knows in his heart that a single one of them is worth more than a million of those tumblers of the circus, who always make their somersault and turn their backs upon their friends, when their support is most needed.

Among the excellent articles in this admirable Monthly, we would call special attention to the serial, "Confederate Notes," by a lady of Virginia.

SOUTHERN REVIEW. per annum. Baltimore, Md.

The April number has come to hand just as we are going to press. We, of course, have not read it and can only give its table of contents. The Origin of the late War; Southern War Poetry; The Teaching and the Study of Geometry; De Tocqueville on the Sovereignty of the People; The Legend of Ve- port and encourage the men, who nus; Recent Histories of Julius are trying to shed light upon the Cæsar; Life, Character, and Works seemingly easy, but really difficult, of Henry Reed; Agricultural subject of successful farming.

The January number (the first honored for their learning and pi- published) was very able. Among ety. In the days of our rebellious its great articles, are the "Educacareer, we learned to esteem and tion of the World," "Earl Stanlove one of these noble men, Rev. hope's Life of Pitt, "Imprison-

The Review is edited by that At the risk of being accused of ripe scholar and profound thinkwant of nationality by the good er, A. T. Bledsoe, L.L. D. It is brother in New York, we will say worthy to bear the name of that that the attachments formed du- great work edited by Legaré and ring the war still cling to us .- adorned by the genius of Pettigru, These stern old rebels have warm Middleton, Pinckney, Simms and and tender hearts, and could easi- so many other gifted men of the

> THE FARMER, Richmond, Virginia,. Terms $3.00.

THE SOUTHERN PLANTER, Richmond, Va. Terms $3.00.

These are both excellent Monthlies of their kind and ought to have the support of the agricultural community. The time was when our farmers could blunder along any way through the year and have an abundant harvest at its close. But that time has passed. They must now seek light Terms $5 from men of science, and information derived from the practical experience of their own class. culture of the earth is the noblest of all the pursuits, and it ought to be brought to the same state of perfection as the other departments of human effort. But it is not, and for the simple reason that those most interested do not supNO

A tha gra bra all t the Tha lign ever here in 1 and stor that nob unti in e

and "Sha Pres

Thei L